III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Some parents will buy any high-tech toy if they think it will help their children, but researchers said puzzles help children with math-related skills.

Psychologist Susan Levine, an expert on mathematics development in young children at the University of Chicago, found children who play with puzzles between ages 2 and 4 later develop better spatial skills. Puzzle play was found to be a significant predictor of cognition after controlling for differences in parents' income, education and the amount of parent talk, Levine said.

The researchers analyzed video recordings of 53 child-parent pairs during everyday activities at home and found children who play with puzzles between 26 and 46 months of age have better spatial skills when assessed at 54 months of age.

"The children who played with puzzles performed better than those who did not, on tasks that assessed their ability to rotate and translate shapes," Levine said in a statement.

The parents were asked to interact with their children as they normally would, and about half of children in the study played with puzzles at one time. Higher-income parents tended to have children play with puzzles more frequently, and both boys and girls who played with puzzles had better spatial skills. However, boys tended to play with more complex puzzles than girls, and the parents of boys provided more spatial language and were more active during puzzle play than parents of girls.

11. According to the passage, if children want to develop better spatial skills, they'd better play with puzzles at the age of ____.

- A. 1 B. 3 C. 5 D. 6

12. In which aspect do children benefit from puzzle play?

- A. Building confidence. B. Developing spatial skills.
C. Learning self-control. D. Gaining high-tech knowledge.

13. What did Levine take into consideration when designing her experiment?

- A. Parents' age. B. Children's imagination.
C. Parents' education. D. Child-parent relationship.

14. How do boys differ from girls in puzzle play?

- A. They play with puzzles more often.
B. They tend to talk less during the game.
C. They prefer to use more spatial language.
D. They are likely to play with tougher puzzles.

15. What is the text mainly about?

- A. A scientific study. B. A mathematical method.
C. A woman psychologist. D. A teaching program.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Accidents are the major cause of death for all young people under 35. They are the fourth most frequent cause of death for all age groups in the U.S. — fourth only to heart disease, cancer and stroke. Each year thousands of Americans lose their lives in accidents, and thousands are permanently crippled. By far the most common types of home accidents are falls. Each year over ten thousand Americans meet death in this way, within the four walls of their home, or in yards around their house. Nine out of ten of the victims are over 65.

But people of all ages experience serious injuries as a result of home falls. It is impossible to guess how many injuries result from falls, but they must run into millions.

Falls can be a problem for all ages. In the process of growing up, children or teenagers often will fall. Fortunately, their bodies are springy, so they may suffer only skinned knees, bumps and bruises. But in an older person, the same fall may cause a broken arm, leg, or hip or other injury that requires hospitalization or medical care. As a person grows older, he may not fall any more often, but the results usually are more serious and may even be fatal.

Preschool children are often killed by falls from open windows and porches. Their normal curiosity and the urge to climb lead them to dangerous heights. Therefore, it is a parent's duty to keep small children away from stairways, open windows and porch railing.

Gates, bars, and other means of protection should be used whenever possible.

Adults fall because they don't look where they are going. Running or taking two steps at a time invites falls. In trying to save an extra trip up the stairs by loading his arms with bundles or boxes that keep him from seeing where he is going, an adult may find it safer to make an extra trip.

16. The most common type of home accidents is ____.

- A. choking B. falling
C. drowning D. burning

17. In this passage the author states that ____.

- A. seat belts save lives
B. most accidents are avoidable
C. heart disease is the greatest killer of Americans
D. the death rate from work-related injuries is increasing

18. Most victims of falls are at least 65 years of age because ____.

- A. old people fall more often than younger people
B. bones become stiff and brittle with age
C. elderly people take unnecessary risks
D. old people don't look where they are going as a result of poor eyesight

19. Adults are injured in falls as a result of ____.

- A. boldness B. dizziness
C. carelessness D. weakness

20. From the last paragraph we may conclude that ____.

- A. as a cause of death in America, accidents rank first
- B. the risk of accidents increases with a person's age
- C. the head is injured more than any other part of the body
- D. most adults are likely to fall due to their careless behaviors

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

When people ask me how I started writing, I find myself describing an urgent need that I felt to work with language. Having said that, I did not know for a long time what I was looking for. It was not until I followed this feeling to its source that I discovered I had a passion for writing. With some encouragement from my colleagues, I had one of my poems published. This bit of success, however, was the point where my problem began.

Back in 1978, I had to travel between three different campuses in the morning, teaching freshman composition. Afternoons I spent taking my daughter to her ballet and horse-riding lessons. I composed my lectures on the way, and that was all the thinking time I had. When I returned home, there was not enough of me left for writing after a full working day.

As a way out, I decided to get up two hours before my usual time. My alarm was set for 5:00 A. M. The first day I shut it off because I had placed it within arm's reach. The second day I set two clocks, one on my night table, and one out in the hallway. I had to jump out of bed and run to silence it before my family was awoken. This was when my morning writing began.

Since that first morning in 1978, I have been following the habit to this day, not making or accepting many excuses for not writing. I wrote my poems in this manner for nearly ten years before my first book was published. When I decided to write a novel, I divided my two hours: the first for poetry, the second for fiction. Well or badly, I wrote at least two pages a day. This is how my novel, The Line of the Sun, was finished. If I had waited to have the time, I would still be waiting to write my novel. What I got out of getting up in the dark to work is the feeling that I am in control. For many people, the initial sense of urgency to create easily dies away because it requires making the tough decision: taking the time to create, stealing it from yourself if it's the only way.

11. What motivated the author to start her writing career?

- A. Her strong wish to share.
- B. Her keen interest in writing.
- C. Her urgent need to make a living.
- D. Her passionate desire for fame.

12. What problem did the author face when she decided to begin her writing?

- A. She was too exhausted to write after a busy day.
- B. She had trouble in deciding on her writing style.
- C. She had to take time to discipline her daughter.
- D. She was unsure about her writing skills.

13. Why did the author place an alarm clock in the hallway?

- A. In case the clock in her room broke down.
- B. In case she failed to hear the ringing.
- C. To force herself out of bed.
- D. To wake up her family.

14. How did the author manage to finish her novel?

- A. By sticking to writing every morning.
- B. By writing when her mind was most active.

C. By drawing inspirations from classic novels.

D. By reducing her teaching hours at school.

15. What can we learn from the author's success in her writing career?

- A. It is never too late to change your job.
- B. Imaginative ideas die away if not taken in time.
- C. A tight schedule is no excuse for lack of action.
- D. Daily life provides ideas for creative writing.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Do you listen to the songs that your parents like? Chances are that you don't. You probably think the music that they like is old and dull and that the songs on your playlist are much cooler.

But here is what scientists found recently: people's music tastes change as they age, according to a study published in the Journal of Personality and Social Psychology. So it's likely that your own musical preference will follow a similar path to your parents' whether you like it or not. We used to think that culture and personality are the only factors that affect one's music choice. But researchers at the University of Cambridge, UK, gathered data from more than 250,000 people over the past 10 years. They noticed that as people age, their social circumstances change, and so does their music taste.

There are three musical periods that people pass through as they mature — "intense", "contemporary" and "sophisticated". The first period comes in the teenage years, during which time people like intense music such as punk and rock because teenagers tend to be aggressive and want to establish their identity as independent individuals.

But as people move into early adulthood, their lifestyle changes — they socialize more and want to build close relationships with others. As a result, they become more fond of contemporary music, such as pop and R&B, which is usually uplifting and danceable and played at parties where people hang out together and chat. When middle age comes, things have settled down for most people. This period will be dominated (支配) by more "sophisticated" music, such as jazz and classical, as well as more catchy music like country, folk, and blues. "For many, this life stage is frequently exhausted by work and family, and there is a requirement for relaxing, emotive music," Jason Rentfrow, a researcher, told The Telegraph.

But you must be thinking: "Aren't there old people who are still into rock music? Of course there are. But Rentfrow explained that their reasons for listening to rock music may have changed. "We use music for different reasons" he said, and thus at that age people may listen to it to remind themselves of their youths.

16. Why do children usually like different songs from their parents according to the passage?

- A. Children prefer cool music.
- B. Music taste changes with age.
- C. Parents' songs are always dull.
- D. Parents have better social circumstances.

17. The underlined word "catchy" in Paragraph 4 probably means ____.

- A. touching and easily remembered
- B. elegant but difficult to understand
- C. awkward and easily captured
- D. flexible and difficult to catch

18. Middle age is a period when people ____.

- A. have an aggressive goal
- B. like Pop and R&B
- C. desire close connections with others
- D. lead a stressful life

19. What can we infer from the last paragraph?

- A. Old people don't like rock music.
- B. Music can serve as a reminder.
- C. Rock music makes old people younger.
- D. Listening to rock music needs reasons.

20. What's the main idea of the passage?

- A. Why do people like music?
- B. How can you improve your music talent?
- C. What influences people's music taste?
- D. Why do different people like different music?

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with ten blanks. You are required to select one word for each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choices. Each choice in bank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter for each item on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

Questions 21-30 are based on the following passage.

I'm usually fairly skeptical about any research that concludes that people are either happier or unhappier or more or less certain of themselves than they were 50 years ago. While any of these statements might be true, they are practically impossible to prove. 21 Still, I was struck by a report which concluded that today's children are significantly more anxious than children in the 1950s. In fact, the analysis showed that normal children ages 9 to 17 exhibit a higher level of 22 today than children who were treated for mental illness 50 years ago.

Why are America's kids so stressed? The report cites two main causes: increasing physical isolation—brought on by high divorce rates and less 23 in the community, among other things—and 24 perception that the world is a more dangerous place.

Given that we can't turn the clock back, adults can still do plenty to help the next generation 25. At the top of the list is nurturing a better appreciation of the limits of individualism. No child is an island. Strengthening social ties helps build communities and 26 individuals against stress.

To help kids build stronger connections with others, you can pull the plug on TVs and computers. Your family will thank you later. They will have more time for face-to-face relationships, and they will get more sleep.

Limit the amount of virtual violence your children are 27 to. It's not just video games and movies; children see a lot of murder and crime on the local news.

Keep your expectations for your children 28. Many 29 successful people never attended Harvard or Yale.

Make exercise part of your daily routine. It will help you cope with your own anxieties and provide a good model for your kids. Sometimes anxiety is unavoidable. But it doesn't have to 30 your life.

A. protect	D. damage	G. involvement	J. exposed	M. committed
B. ridiculous	E. reasonable	H. ruin	K. anxiety	N. cope
C. highly	F. scientifically	I. fight	L. growing	O. functionally

IV. Cloze (20 points)

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Questions 31-40 are based on the following passage.

Have you ever volunteered for something? Why did you do it? How did you feel when you finished? 31 arrive early, stay late, go without breaks, and always smile. They do a job without being paid and they are willing to offer help. Can you imagine what would happen to our work 32 everybody did his or her job in the volunteer spirit of "I want to" rather than in the contractual spirit of "I have to"? Contracts require you to do what you have 33 to do or promised to do. Volunteerism also requires you to do so, 34 it leads to higher productivity at the same time.

Imagine what a country would be like without volunteers. Consider the organizations that 35 volunteers: youth groups, hospitals, schools, sports leagues and environmental groups — in every area throughout our country. Our life would be less satisfying if it were not for the volunteers who selflessly offer their time while 36 no pay — and often little or no recognition.

What is the force behind these unusual efforts and the great desire to help others? Volunteers find the work extremely satisfying and volunteering 37 personal skills. It teaches us how to use our time more productively. More 38, it teaches us that it isn't always what you have, but more often what you 39 that matters most in life. It teaches us to place a greater value on what we contribute to society than on what we get.

Through volunteering, we make more than just a living with our lives — we make a 40 — and create "ordinary" miracles. May each of us volunteer to make and keep our country friendlier, kinder and more helpful in the world!

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Many post-80s couples are complaining that going to the movies, shopping or attending parties have become impossible since their kids were born. That's the way most parents are living their lives, no weekends of their own, no time to visit friends, not even a chance of promotion in their jobs.

Asking help from their parents might be a way out, but problems are that some aging parents are not strong enough to take care of the kids, and that the kids may also become too spoiled by their grandparents.

Then, here comes a solution: families with kids can form a small group, and parents of each family can take turns to look after all the kids in this group on weekends. Thus, other parents can have some quiet time and feel free to do something they've been planning for a long time. At the same time, the kids can make new friends and won't be hanging around their parents all day long. This is baby-pooling.

11. Many post-80s couples can't go to the movies, shop or attend parties because _____.

- A. they have to look after their kids
- B. they have to look after their parents
- C. they are busy with their work
- D. they have no money

12. In paragraph 2, "a way out" means _____.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

An American researcher has developed a simple device to help people stop snoring. The device restricts the movements of the tissue that causes the disliked sound. Snoring is a common problem. It may prevent a person from getting enough sleep. It may also prevent enough oxygen from reaching the heart and lungs during sleep. But for most people, snoring affects relations with the other person who must sleep in the same room.

Snoring happens when the sleeping person breathes with the mouth open. In the back of the mouth, the tissues surrounding the entrance of the throat are soft. As the person breathes, the movement of the air around the soft tissues causes them to move. This tissue movement causes the sound we call snoring. A number of possible solutions have been proposed. Some devices keep the mouth shut. They force the patient to breathe only through the nose. A medical operation is also possible. Other devices listen for the sound of snoring and then wake the patient. The new anti-snoring device was developed by a dentist, George Wagner of the Indiana University School of Dentistry. He developed a piece of plastic that fits up against the inside of the mouth. The device keeps the soft tissues from vibrating and making the snoring noise. It was worn only at night. Doctor Wagner said several patients report that the simple device has ended their snoring problem.

16. What's the meaning of "snoring"?

- A. Noises made while one sleeps.
- B. Dreaming while one sleeps.
- C. Speaking while one sleeps.
- D. Sighs given while one sleeps.

17. Which of the following sentences is NOT true?

- A. Snoring may prevent one from sound sleep.
- B. Snoring may cause lack of oxygen to the heart and lungs.
- C. Snoring may result in a heart attack.
- D. Snoring may affect one's roommates.

18. When does snoring happen?

- A. When sleeping with open mouth.
- B. When breathing with the mouth closed.
- C. When dreaming at night, even during the day.
- D. When being poor in health.

19. From the passage we know that the simplest and most efficient way to prevent a person from snoring is _____.

- A. to give the patient a medical operation
- B. to keep the soft tissue in the throat from vibrating
- C. to wake him up as soon as he or she snores
- D. to listen to the sound of snoring

20. How many possible solutions to snoring have been proposed in the passage?

- A. One B. Two C. Three D. Four

Questions 21-30 are based on the following passage.

After the violent earthquake that shook Los Angeles in 1994, earthquake scientists had good news to report: The damage and death toll could have been much worse. More than 60 people died in this earthquake. By comparison, an earthquake of similar 21 that shook America in 1998 claimed 25,000 victims. Injuries and deaths were 22 less in Los Angeles because the quake occurred at 4:31 a.m. On a holiday, when traffic was light on the city's highway. In addition, 23 made to the construction codes in Los Angeles during the last 20 years have strengthened the city's buildings and highways, making them more 24 to quakes.

In the past, making structures quake-resistant meant firm yet 25 materials, such as steel and wood, that bend without breaking. Later, people tried to lift a building off its foundation, and insert rubber and steel between the building and its foundation to 26 the impact of ground vibrations. The most 27 designs give buildings brains as well as concrete and steel supports, called smart buildings, the structures respond like living organisms to an earthquake's vibrations. When ground shakes and the building tips forward, the computer would 28 the building to shift in the opposite direction. The new designs should offer even greater 29 to cities where earthquakes often take place.

The new smart structures could be very 30 to build. However, they would save many lives and would be less likely to be damaged during earthquakes.

Parents feel that it is difficult to live with teenagers. Then again, teenagers have 31 feelings about their parents, saying that it is not easy living with them. According to a recent research, the most common 32 between parents and teenagers is that regarding untidiness and daily routine tasks. On the one hand, parents go mad over messy rooms, clothes thrown on the floor and their children's refusal to help with the 33. On the other hand, teenagers lose their patience continually when parents blame them for dropping the towel in the bathroom, not cleaning up their room or refusing to do the shopping at the supermarket.

The research, conducted by St. George University, shows that different parents have different 34 to these problems. However, some approaches are more 35 than others. For example, those parents who yell at their children for their untidiness, but 36 clean the room for them, have fewer chances of changing their children's 37. On the contrary, those who let teenagers experience the consequences of their actions can do better. For example, when teenagers who don't help their parents with the shopping don't find their favorite drink in the refrigerator, they are forced to reconsider their actions.

Psychologists say that 38 is the most important thing in parent-child relationships. Parents should 39 to their children but at the same time they should lend an ear to what they have to say. Parents may scold their children when they are untidy but they should also understand that their room is their own private space. Communication is a two-way process. It is only by listening to and 40 each other that problems between parents and children can be settled.

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

The human brain weighs about 1.4 kilograms, but it can hold much more information than most computers. However, there is another difference between humans and computers. Computers don't forget information they are given, but humans often do. No one remembers everything, and luckily we don't usually have to. But everyone can improve their memory if they want to. Here are some suggestions.

Try to use new information immediately. For example, if you meet someone who says "Hi! I'm Carlos," don't just say "Hello". Repeat the person's name. Say "_____".

Break a big number into smaller parts. For example, it's hard to memorize 109244153. But if you break it into three parts—109/244/153—it becomes easier.

Write out what you need to remember over and over again. This will help you keep it in mind longer, especially for memorizing formulas or facts.

Always review information. If you bring what you've learned back to your mind, it becomes easier to remember. For example, before you go to sleep, it's a good idea to review the new things you learned.

Discuss with a friend. It is always easier to remember things through discussions. You can have a discussion about what's right and what's wrong, and it will lead to the right answer.

Never tell yourself that you have a bad memory. You can always do something to help improve your memory. And everyone's memory gets better if they use it often enough.

All of the suggestions are helpful. If you follow them, you are certain to improve your memory.

11. How many suggestions are mentioned in the passage?

- A. Three B. Four
C. Five D. Six

12. Which should be put in the blank in Paragraph 2?

- A. Hello, Carlos. B. How do you do?
C. Hello, I am Sophia. D. Glad to meet you!

13. What can help memorize a big number more easily according to the passage?

- A. To store it in a computer.
B. To break it into smaller parts.
C. To discuss it with a friend.
D. To review it before you sleep.

14. Which of the following is true according to the passage?

- A. Discussing with friends can help you remember things.
B. Always reviewing information can help you fall asleep.
C. Formulas and facts can help you learn about your brain.
D. Human beings can improve their memory by computer.

15. What does the sentence "Never tell yourself that you have a bad memory" mean?

- A. You should tell others about your bad memory.
B. You should believe in other people all the time.
C. You should ask others to improve their memory.
D. You should be confident in your memory ability.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

What's your dream vacation? Watching wildlife in Kenya? Boating down the Amazon? Sunbathing in Malaysia? New chances are opening up all the time to explore the world. So we visit travel agents, compare packages and prices, and pay our money.

We know what our vacation costs us. But do we know what it might cost someone else? It's true that many poorer countries now depend on tourism for foreign income. Unfortunately, though, tourism often harms the local people more than it helps them.

It might cost their homes and lands. In Myanmar, 5,200 people were forced to leave their homes among the pagodas in Bagan so that tourists could visit the pagodas.

Tourism might also cost the local people their livelihood and dignity. Local workers often find only menial jobs in the tourist industry. And most of the profits do not help the local economy. Instead, profits return to the tour operators in wealthier countries. When the Maasai people in Tanzania were driven from their lands, some moved to city slums. Others now make a little money selling souvenirs or posing for photos.

Problems like these were observed more than 20 years ago. But now some non-government organizations, tour operators and local governments are working together to begin correcting them. Tourists, too, are putting on the pressure.

The result is responsible tourism, or "ethical tourism." Ethical tourism has people at its heart. New international agreements and codes of conduct can help protect the people's lands, homes, economies and cultures. The beginnings are small, though, and the problems are complex.

But take heart. The good news is that everyone, including us, can play a part to help the local people in the places we visit. Tour operators and companies can help by making sure that local people work in good conditions and earn reasonable wages.

They can make it a point to use only locally owned hotels, restaurants and guide services. They can share profits fairly to help the local economy. And they can involve the local people in planning and managing tourism.

What can tourists do? First, we can ask tour companies to provide information about the conditions of local citizens. We can then make our choices and tell them why. And while we're abroad, we can:

1. Buy local foods and products, not imported ones.
2. Pay a fair price for goods and services and not bargain for the cheapest price.

3. Avoid flaunting wealth.
4. Ask before taking photographs of people.
5. They are not just part of the landscape!
6. Let's enjoy our vacation and make sure others do, too.

16. What is probably the best title for the article?

- A. Tourism Causes Bad Effects.
- B. Tourism Calls for Good Behavior.
- C. Vacations Bring a Lot of Fun.
- D. Vacations Cost More Than You Think.

17. Which of the following is not mentioned?

- A. Local people were well paid to leave their lands.
- B. Tourists may stay in hotels opened by local people.
- C. Local people are mainly provided with low-paying work.
- D. Tourists could bargain with local people for a reasonable price.

18. The underlined phrase "take heart" means _____.

- A. pay attention
- B. take care
- C. cheer up
- D. calm down

19. According to the passage, the writer thinks _____.

- A. tourism is not a promising industry
- B. dream vacations should be spent abroad
- C. the problems caused by tourism are easy to settle
- D. tourists should respect local customs and culture

20. According to this passage, which of the following statements is FALSE?

- A. Tourism often harms the local people more than it helps them.
- B. Tourism will help the local economy.
- C. Tour operators should care about the local people livelihood.
- D. Tourists could ask the local people before taking photographs.

As a general rule, all forms of activity lead to boredom when they are performed on a routine basis. As a matter of fact, we can see this principle at work in people of all ages. For example, on Christmas morning, children are excited about playing with their new toys. But their 31 soon wears off and by January those 32 toys can be found put away in the basement. The world is full of half-filled stamp albums and unfinished models, each standing as a monument to someone's passing interest. When parents bring home a pet, their child 33 bathes it and brushes its fur. Within a short time, however, the 34 of caring for the animal is handed over to the parents.

Adolescents enter high school with great 35 but are soon looking forward to 36. The same is true of the young adults going to college. And then, how many adults, who now complain about the long drives to work, eagerly drove for hours at a time when they first 37 their driver's licenses? Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

It's very interesting to note where the debate about diversity is taking place. It is taking place primarily in political circles. Here at the College Fund, we have a lot of contact with top corporate leaders; none of them is talking about getting rid of those instruments that produce diversity. In fact, they say that if their companies are to compete in the global village and in the global marketplace, diversity is an imperative. They also say that the need for talented, skilled Americans means we have to expand the pool of potential employees. And in looking at where birth rates are growing and at where the population is shifting, corporate America understands that expanding the pool means promoting policies that help provide skills to more minorities, more women and more immigrants. Corporate leaders know that if that does not occur in our society, they will not have the engineers, the scientists, the lawyers, or the business managers they will need.

Likewise, I don't hear people in the academy saying. "Let's go backward. Let's go back to the good old days, when we had a meritocracy" (which was never true—we never had a meritocracy, although we've come closer to it in the last 30 years.) I recently visited a great little college in New York where the campus has doubled its minority population in the last six years. I talked with an African American who has been a professor there for a long time, and she remembers that when she first joined the community, there were fewer than a handful of minorities on campus. Now, all of us feel the university is better, and this positive view of diversity holds true whether in corporate board rooms or on college campuses.

11. The word "imperative" in Paragraph 1 most probably refers to something _____.

- A. superficial
- B. remarkable
- C. debatable
- D. essential

12. Which of the following groups of people still differ in their views on diversity?

- A. minorities
- B. politicians
- C. professors
- D. managers

13. High corporate leaders seem to be in favor of promoting diversity so as to _____.

- A. lower the rate of unemployment
- B. win equal political rights for minorities
- C. be competitive in the world market
- D. satisfy the demands of a growing population

14. It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

- A. meritocracy can never be realized without diversity
- B. American political circles will not accept diversity
- C. it is unlikely that diversity will occur in the U.S. media
- D. minorities can only enter the fields where no debate is heard about diversity

15. According to the passage diversity can be achieved in American society by _____.

- A. expanding the pool of potential employees
- B. promoting policies that provide skills to employees
- C. training more engineers, scientists lawyers and business managers
- D. providing education for all regardless of race or sex

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Fatherhood is going to have a different meaning and bring forth a different response from every man who hears these words. Some feel pride when they receive the news, while others worry, wondering whether they will be good fathers. Although there are some men who like children and may have had considerable experience with them, others do not particularly care for children and spend little time with them. Many fathers and mothers have been planning and looking forward to children for sometime. For other couples, pregnancy was an accident that both husband and wife have accepted willingly or unwillingly.

Whatever the reaction to the birth of a child, it is obvious that the shift from the role of husband to that of father is a difficult task. Yet, unfortunately, few attempts have been made to educate fathers in this transition process. Although numerous books have been written about American mothers, only recently has literature focused on the role of fathers.

It is argued by some writers that the change to the father's role, although difficult, is not nearly as great as the change the wife must take to the mother's role. The mother's role seems to require a complete transformation in daily routine and highly innovative adaptation. On the other hand, the father's role is less demanding and immediate. However, even though we mentioned the fact that growing numbers of women are working outside the home, the father is still thought by many as the breadwinner in the household.

16. What can we know about fatherhood from the passage?

- A. It brings a feeling of excitement to most men.
- B. It makes some men feel proud and others uneasy.
- C. It has a different meaning for men who have daughters.
- D. It means a responsibility that men accept unwillingly.

17. What does the passage say about the shift from the role of husband to that of father?

- A. Numerous books have been written about it.
- B. Not enough attention has been paid to it.
- C. The shift is harder for men than for women.
- D. The shift is a difficult but incomplete one.

18. What can we know about mothers from the passage?

- A. Mothers get more attention and recognition from society.
- B. Mothers are innovative and demanding according to some writers.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Home exercise is a new phenomenon in fitness. It's easy to see why it has become increasingly popular among the public.

All it takes to get results at home is an exercise mat and some free weights. Even if you don't have these tools, there are several kinds of exercise you can do around the house. You can always try the exercise that uses your own body weight. The secret to success is to exercise the right way without hurting yourself.

At home, you can train in your own time. You are not affected by the hours of your gym or your trainer. This is an excellent solution for stay-at-home moms, and those individuals who work from home or have an irregular work schedule. With the number of tools available today, it is simple to set up an atmosphere in the comfort of your own home.

To get results at home, you need self-motivation and discipline, since you're going to be on your own. It's not as hard as you think and can be enjoyable and beneficial. When you are committed mentally to pursuing a leaner, energized and dynamic fitness level, changes happen much faster.

There're some other advantages home exercise has over a health club. After all, a club is a social institution. If one gets there to socialize more, he will exercise less. A club could also be crowded. Many people may wait in line for the equipment. With home exercise, there's no waiting period. So, many individuals are now exercising at home. In fact, as a recent study says, exercising at home is just as beneficial as working out at a health club. It also found that people who trained at home were more likely to stick with their program than those who exercised at a club.

11. One advantage of home exercise is that it ____.

- A. causes no injury
- B. yields quick results
- C. takes little hard work
- D. requires few devices

12. Home exercise best fits ____.

- A. stay-at-home moms
- B. policewomen with regular plans
- C. office workers
- D. school children

13. To achieve the desired fruits from home exercise, you need to ____.

- A. enjoy yourself
- B. know its benefits
- C. restrain yourself
- D. record yourself

14. People who go to health clubs are likely to ____.

- A. stick with their favorite programs
- B. make better use of gym equipment
- C. reap more gains from the training
- D. spend more time socializing than exercising

15. This passage mainly talks about ____.

- A. types of home exercise
- B. advantages of home exercise
- C. ways to do home exercise
- D. people fit for home exercise

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Machines might one day replace human laborers in a number of professions, but surely they won't ever replace human artists. Right?

Think again. Not even will our artists be safe from the inevitable machine takeover, if a new development in artificial intelligence (AI) by a team of researchers from Rutgers University and Facebook's AI lab offers a clue of what's to come. They have designed an AI capable of not only producing art, but actually inventing whole new aesthetic styles similar to movements like impressionism or abstract expressionism. The idea, according to researcher Marian Mazzone, is to make art that is "novel, but not too novel".

The model used in this project involves a generator network, which produces the images, and a discriminator network, which "judges" whether it's art. Once the generator learns how to produce work that the discriminator recognizes as art, it's given an additional instruction: to produce art that doesn't match any known aesthetic styles.

"You want to have something really creative and striking, — but at the same time not to go too far and make something that isn't aesthetically pleasing," explained Ahmed Elgammal.

The art that was generated by the system was then presented to human judges alongside human-produced art without showing which was which. To the researchers' surprise, the machine-made art scored slightly higher overall than the human-produced art.

Of course, machines can't yet replace the meaning conveyed in works by human artists, but this project shows that artist skill sets certainly seem reproducible by machines.

What will it take for machines to produce content with meaning? That might be the last AI frontier. Human artists can at least hang their hats in that field for now.

"Imagine having people over for a dinner party and they ask, 'Who is that by?' And you say, 'Well, it's a machine actually.' That would be an interesting conversation starter," said Kevin Walker.

16. What is implied in the second paragraph?

- A. Artists won't be replaced by AI.
- B. AI can produce new styles of art.
- C. AI is totally at a loss about impressionism.
- D. AI fails to reflect abstract expressionism.

17. What did Marian find in his study?

Questions 21-30 are based on the following passage.

To spend or save is a question which many people have. There is always a(n) 21 whether one should spend the money that he has earned or save that money for the future. Well, there is no 22 answer to the question as different people have different 23 on their life, and that is the reason why some people tend to spend all the money earned while others 24 control over their money.

People who spend all the money do not think much about the future. The only thing that they enjoy doing most is to 25 pleasure from spending money. For example, if they like a particular car, mobile phone or laptop, they will buy it without giving it a thought. For them, the most important thing is to satisfy their material 26. People who have their first job or who haven't married often fall in this category.

In the long run, saving is a good 27 for one's life as saving helps an individual to plan for future 28 needs. That is also the reason why many people save money for a rainy day. Individuals who can 29 their spending save money successfully. Instead of buying on impulse, they delay their purchasing decision and won't be easily 30 by commercial ads. Individuals who have responsibility for their family belong to this category.

Many people go to school for an education. They learn languages, history, geography, physics, chemistry and maths. Others go to school to learn a skill so that they can 31 a living. School 32 is very important and useful. Yet no one can learn everything from school. A teacher, no matter how much he 33, can not teach his students everything they 34 to know. The teacher's job is to show his students how to read and how to 35. So much more is to be learned outside school by the students themselves.

It is always more important to know how to study by 36 than to memorize some facts or formula. It is actually quite easy to learn a certain fact in history or a formula in mathematics. But it is very difficult to use a formula in 37 out a maths problem. Great scientists, such as Einstein, Newton and Galileo, didn't learn many things from school. But they were all so 38 that they invented so many things for mankind.

The reason for their success is that they knew how to study. They read books that were not 39 at school. They worked hard all their lives, wasting not a single moment. They would ask many questions as they read and they did thousands of 40.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

One of the favorite foods in the United States is the hamburger, a kind of flat round bread with fine-cut beef in between. The favorite place to buy a hamburger is a fast-food restaurant, where people order their food, wait a few minutes to get it over the counter and carry it to their tables themselves. People also take their food out of the restaurant and eat it in their cars or in their homes. At some fast-food restaurants, people can order their food, pay for it and pick it up without leaving their cars.

There are many kinds of fast-food restaurants in the United States. Most of the restaurants sell hamburgers or other popular foods among American. In addition, there are many fast-food restaurants that serve Chinese food, Italian food, chicken, seafood and ice-cream. The idea of a fast-food restaurant is so popular that nearly every kind of food can be found in one.

密封线内禁止作答

Fast food restaurants are popular because they show the American way of life. First, they are not formal restaurants. People wear any type of dress when they go to a fast-food place. Second, they are fast. People who are busy do not want to spend time preparing their food or waiting while someone else prepares it. In fast food restaurants the food is usually ready before the customer even orders it. Finally, most food in a fast-food restaurant is not expensive. Therefore, people can often eat at a fast-food restaurant without spending too much money, while they may not be able to go to more expensive restaurants very often.

11. Which of the following is NOT true according to the passage?

- A. Chinese food is also served in some fast-food restaurants.
- B. People can have almost every kind of food in fast food restaurants.
- C. Fast food is usually expensive.
- D. Fast food can be taken out of the restaurants.

12. Fast food restaurants are popular because they ____.

- A. are many
- B. are fast
- C. are expensive restaurants
- D. serve expensive food

13. According to the writer, American people ____.

- A. are always busy
- B. prefer ordinary type of dress
- C. do not want to spend too much time preparing their food
- D. go to more expensive restaurants very often

14. According to the passage, the favorite restaurants in the U.S. are ____.

- A. the Chinese restaurants
- B. the fast-food restaurants
- C. more expensive restaurants
- D. less expensive restaurants

15. The best title for this passage would be ____.

- A. Fast Food Restaurants in the U.S.
- B. The Favorite Food in the U.S.
- C. The American Way of Life
- D. Different kinds of Restaurants

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

We can make mistakes at any age. Some mistakes we make are about money. But most mistakes are about people. "Did Jerry really care when I broke up with Helen?" "When I got that great job, did Jerry really feel good about it, as a friend? Or did he envy my luck?" When we look back, doubts like these can make us feel bad. But when we look back, it's too late.

Why do we go wrong about our friends or our enemies? Sometimes what people say hides their real meaning. And if we don't really listen, we miss the feeling behind the words. Suppose someone tells you, "You're a lucky dog." Is he really on your side? If he says, "You're a lucky guy" or "You're a lucky girl", that's being friendly. But "lucky dog"? There's a bit of envy in those words. Maybe he doesn't see it himself. But bringing in the "dog" bit puts you down a little. What he may be saying is that he doesn't think you deserve your luck.

How can you tell the real meaning behind someone's words? One way is to take a good look at the person talking. Do his words fit the way he looks? Does what he says square with the tone of voice? His posture? The look in his eyes? Stop and think. The minute you spend thinking about the real meaning of what people say to you may save another mistake.

16. From the questions in the first paragraph we can learn that the speaker ____.

- A. feels happy, thinking of how nice his friends were to him
- B. feels he may not have "read" his friends' true feeling correctly
- C. thinks it was a mistake to have broken up with his girlfriend, Helen
- D. is sorry that his friends let him down

17. In the second paragraph, the author uses the example of "You're a lucky dog" to show that ____.

- A. the speaker of this sentence is just being friendly
- B. this saying means the same as "You're a lucky guy" or "You're a lucky girl"
- C. sometimes the words used by a speaker give a clue to the feeling behind the words
- D. the word "dog" shouldn't be used to apply to people

18. This passage tries to tell you how to ____.

- A. avoid mistakes about money and friends
- B. bring the "dog" bit into our conversation
- C. avoid mistakes in understanding what people tell you
- D. keep people friendly without trusting them

Questions 21-30 are based on the following passage.

What do we know about love? Is it, as some people would suggest, a mysterious force? Or can it be explained and possibly even _____ 21 _____? Well, even in this scientific and reason-driven age, love still seems to _____ 22 _____ total understanding. We can, however, know something about love and make stronger _____ 23 _____ between individuals?

One thing that seems to _____ 24 _____ love is distance. The common idea is that the love between people grows as they are _____ 25 _____. Sometimes it is true that longing for someone who has gone overseas becomes more _____ 26 _____.

Something that _____ 27 _____ love is danger. Send both lovers to dangerous places and they will end up loving each other more. This could be caused by the worry it develops. It could also be that feelings of _____ 28 _____ or need transform into love with time.

Love gives us warmth, courage, and a feeling of being safe, but it also _____ 29 _____ selfless devotion and sacrifice. If you are truly _____ 30 _____ to finding true love, you should make yourself more interesting. Do things that you enjoy and try to meet people who share identical interests.

Most young people enjoy some form of _____ 31 _____ activity. It may be walking, cycling or swimming, or in winter, skating or skiing. It may be a game of some kind of football, hockey, golf, or tennis. It may be mountaineering.

Those who have a _____ 32 _____ for climbing high and difficult mountains are often looked upon with astonishment. Why are men and women willing to _____ 33 _____ cold and hardship, and to take risks on high mountains? This astonishment is caused probably by the _____ 34 _____ between mountaineering and other forms of activity to which men devote their leisure time.

Mountaineering is a sport and not a game. There are no man-made rules; _____ 35 _____ there are for such games as golf and football. There are, of course, rules of a different kind which it would be dangerous to ignore, but it is this freedom from man-made rules that makes mountaineering _____ 36 _____ to many people. Those who climb mountains are free to use their own methods.

If we compare mountaineering and other more familiar sports, we might think that one big difference is that mountaineering is not a "team game". We should be mistaken in this. There are, it is true, no "matches" between "teams" of climbers, but when climbers are on a rock face _____ 37 _____ by a rope on which their lives may depend, there is obviously teamwork.

The mountain climber knows that he may have to fight forces that are stronger and more powerful than man. He has to fight the forces of nature. His sport requires high mental and physical _____ 38 _____.

A mountain climber continues to improve the skill year after year. A skier is probably past his best by the age of thirty, and most international tennis _____ 39 _____ are in their early twenties. But it is not unusual for a man of fifty or sixty to climb the highest mountains in the Alps. They may take more time than younger men, but they probably climb with more skill and less waste of effort, and they certainly _____ 40 _____ equal enjoyment.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Colds are very common. The symptoms of the common cold include a sore throat, runny nose, stuffed-up nose, and tiredness. Colds are caused by viruses, but scientists cannot explain the exact cause. Over dozens of years, scientists have tried to do different experiments to find the cure. Their findings are universally the same —there is no cure. Many people, however, believe that they know the causes of and cures for the common cold. For example, they believe that it is possible to get a cold if we get chilled, if we get extra tired, or if we are too close to a person with a cold. In other words, if we want to prevent catching a cold, we should stay warm and dry, we should avoid getting too tired, and we should not be in close contact with people who have colds.

Meanwhile, there are probably hundreds of "cures" throughout the world for the common cold. For example, the following suggestions are very popular in quite a number of societies: drink plenty of water; get extra rest; take a lot of vitamins; take aspirin; keep warm and so on.

Each year people spend a lot of money on cold medicines—pills, oral liquids and cough lozenges. But these medicines do not cure colds. They can only relieve cold symptoms. In other words, they make us feel better. Although we human beings cannot cure colds, we have desired to improve our health. Perhaps one day we can find out the ways of curing the common colds. As ordinary people, we do not know whether the day to find the cure is close to us or not.

11. The passage is mainly about ____.

- A. looking for the cause of the common cold
- B. introducing some cures for the common cold
- C. some general knowledge about the common cold
- D. new medicines for curing the common cold

12. According to the passage, people with colds feel ____.

- A. stuffy
- B. tired
- C. thirsty
- D. dizzy

13. To prevent catching a cold, you ____.

- A. should go out on a rainy day
- B. should not wash your hair in cold weather
- C. should not keep away from a person who has a cold
- D. should not eat too much

14. Which of the following is NOT a "cure" for the common cold?

- A. Take a lot of vitamins.
- B. Drink plenty of water.
- C. Get more rest.
- D. Put on as many clothes as possible.

15. Which of the following is true about the common cold?

- A. There are no medicines that can cure colds.
- B. There are hundreds of symptoms of the common cold.
- C. People can not find out the cures for the common cold.
- D. Scientists are close to finding a cure for colds.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Inevitably, as you try to make progress you will need the help of others. Getting this help may have less to do with your formal position and authority and more to do with your strategy and approach, which can range from a simple favor to convincing others to accept a priority of yours as if it were their own.

Define what needs to be done. Indistinct goals lead to indistinct results. By defining all the tasks required you increase the likelihood of success. Be sure to include status reports and deadlines as you define specific action items that are needed.

Ask an individual for help. When you make a general request for volunteers during a meeting, colleagues often interpret it as "whoever doesn't have much of anything to do can work on this". Your chances of getting someone to volunteer thus tend to be slim. However, if you think about who might best be able to help with a task and then specifically ask that person for help, your odds of getting him or her to accept the task increase dramatically.

Thank others for their assistance. Always thank and acknowledge others for their help. The person will feel that his or her time and energy were appreciated. In addition, you will likely be able to call on the person again in the future for assistance. But remember to return the favor when he or she needs your help. Such give-and-take behavior could lead to a valuable alliance.

Distribute your honor. If you're congratulated for a job well done, let your supervisors know who helped you do it. Giving credit where credit is due will not only ingratiate you with your helper, but it will impress the bosses into considering you for future promotion. After all, the best managers remain those who are best at getting others to help them complete their work for the common good.

16. Your success in getting others' help will mainly result from ____.

- A. your authority
- B. your methods
- C. your relationship
- D. your position

17. You will likely be able to get help from others if you ____.

- A. ask if there is anyone free to help you
- B. make a general request during a meeting
- C. ask the specific person for help directly
- D. seek for successful person for help directly

18. You should thank others for their help so that ____.

- A. they'll spend more time and energy to help you
- B. they'll return the favor when needing help
- C. they'll think what they're done is worthy
- D. they'll make a strong alliance with you

19. According to the passage, which of the following is NOT what you should do after getting credit?

- A. Asking your boss to give you a promotion
- B. Sharing your credit with the helper
- C. Letting your boss know who helped you
- D. Distributing credit to your boss if he helped you

20. This passage mainly discusses ____.

- A. how to get a promotion
- B. how to get others' help
- C. how to make a progress
- D. how to get along with colleagues

Questions 21-30 are based on the following passage.

In families with two working parents, fathers may have more impact on a child's language development than mothers, a new study suggests.

Researchers ____ 21 ____ 92 families form 11 childcare centers before their children were a year old, interviewing each to establish income, level of education and childcare arrangements. Overall, it was a group of well-educated families, with married parents both living in the home.

When the children were 2, researchers videotaped them at home in free-play sessions with both parents, ____ 22 ____ all of their speech. The study will appear in the November issue of The Journal of Applied Developmental Psychology.

The scientists measured the ____ 23 ____ number of utterance (话语) of the parents, the number of different words they used, the complexity of their sentences and other ____ 24 ____ of their speech. On average, fathers spoke less than mothers did, but they did not differ in the length of utterances or proportion of questions asked.

Finally, the researchers ____ 25 ____ the children's speech at age 3, using a standardized language test. The only predictors of high scores on the test were the mother's level of education, the ____ 26 ____ of childcare and the number of different words the father used.

The researchers are ____ 27 ____ why the father's speech, and not the mother's, had an effect.

"It's well ____ 28 ____ that the mother's language does have an impact," said Nadya Pancsofar, the lead author of the study. It could be that the high-functioning mothers in the study had ____ 29 ____ had a strong influence on their children's speech development, Ms. Pancsofar said, "or it may be that mothers are ____ 30 ____ in a way we didn't measure in the study."

Passage 1

Questions 21-25 are based on the following passage.

Imagine you are at the supermarket checkout. You pay the cashier, load your food into the cart, then take one third of your newly purchased items outside and throw them into the trash.

This may sound farfetched, but millions of us worldwide do this on a regular basis, although in a more non-direct way. Figures published this year by the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization estimate that over 30 percent of the food produced worldwide goes to waste. In the west, most of this food is thrown away by businesses that are unable to sell it, or by consumers who buy too much. And the majority of this food, despite being past its sell-by date, is still perfectly fit for human consumption.

So where do these excess products end up? "We receive food from various sources" says Adam Smith, founder of the Real Junk Food Project, on his company's website. The British company recently made headlines in the UK after it became the country's first "food waste supermarket", offering products that would otherwise have ended up in a landfill site. Most of its customers are low-income families, or even college students who find it difficult to afford food.

Some retailers across Europe are also taking action. France recently passed a law that says all supermarkets must now donate all of their unsold produce to charities, while the Italian government has also put similar measures in place. Hundreds of cafes that serve meals made from surplus food have been set up across the continent too, selling dishes at rock bottom prices or even giving them away for free.

So what can we do as individuals to help prevent our dinner ending up in the bin? "In two words: Buy less. Or at least shop smarter," Johathan Bloom, who runs the blog Wasted Food, tells Foodtank.com.

21. What can we learn about food waste?

- A. Food waste is very serious now.
B. Buying less leads to food waste.
C. Eating less leads to food waste.
D. Energy shortage results from food waste.

22. What does the underlined phrase "sell-by date" in Paragraph 2 probably mean?

- A. The last limited date to sell.
B. The date to sell out.
C. The date on sale.
D. The date to produce.

23. What do people do to reduce food waste according to the text?

- A. Recycle the food from the trash.
B. Donate unsold produce to charities.
C. Eat up meals made from leftover food.
D. Offer food to the low-income families.

Passage 2

Questions 26-30 are based on the following passage.

In the fall of 1924, Thomas Wolfe, newly coming from his courses in playwriting at Harvard, joined the ten of us who were teaching English composition in New York University. I had never before seen a man so tall as he, and so ungraceful. I pitied him and went out of my way to help him get his work started and to make him feel at home.

His students soon let me know that he had no need of my protectiveness. They spoke of his ability to tell a simple thing in such a manner as to have them bursting into laughter or struggling to keep back their tears, of his habit of writing three pages of remarks on a student's one-page composition, and of his astonishing freedom in expressing in words anything he had seen or heard or tasted or felt.

Indeed, his students made so much of his powers of observation that I decided to make a little test and see for myself. My chance came one morning when the students were slowly gathering for nine o'clock classes.

Upon arriving at the university that day, I found Wolfe alone in the large room which served all the English composition teachers as an office. He did not refuse when I asked him to come with me out into the hall, and he only smiled when we reached a classroom door and I told him to enter alone and look around.

He stepped in, remained no more than thirty seconds, and then came out. "Tell me what you see," I said as I took his place in the room, leaving him in the hall with his back to the door. Without the least hesitation and without a single mistake, he gave the number of seats in the room, pointed out those which boys were seated in and those girls were seated in, named the colors each student was wearing, pointed out the Latin verb written on the blackboard, and pictured in detail the view of Washington Square from the windows.

As I joined Wolfe again, I was speechless with astonishment. He, on the contrary, was wholly calm as he said, "The worst thing about it is that I'll remember it all."

26. What is the passage mainly discussing?

- A. Thomas Wolfe's teaching life.
- B. Thomas Wolfe's courses in playwriting.
- C. Thomas Wolfe's ability of telling stories.
- D. Thomas Wolfe's genius.

27. Which of the following is TRUE of Thomas Wolfe?

- A. He failed to finish his courses at Harvard.
- B. He began teaching right after his graduation.
- C. He regarded New York University as his home.
- D. He had a polite manner.

28. What do the students think of Thomas Wolfe?

- A. He was a good storyteller.
- B. He was willing to protect his students.
- C. He was ungraceful.
- D. He was easy to get along with.

29. Which of the following is NOT mentioned in the passage?

- A. Wolfe's students praised Wolfe's power of observation.
- B. The writer did an experiment on Wolfe's ability.
- C. Wolfe's students asked the writer to have a test of their ability.
- D. Wolfe did not feel angry when he was tested.

30. What do we learn about Wolfe from the passage?

- A. He tried hard to remember what was in the classroom.
- B. He stayed in the classroom for a short time.
- C. He quickly drew a picture of Washington Square.
- D. He followed the writer into the classroom.

One Monday morning, while the children were enjoying "free play", I stepped to the doorway of the classroom to take a break. Suddenly, I 31 a movement of the heavy wooden door. This was the very door I 32 guided the children through to ensure their safety from the bitter cold. I felt a chill go through my body.

My legs carried me to that door, and I pushed it open. It was one of my kindergarteners who I thought was 33 that day. He had been dropped off at school late and was 34 to open the door.

He must have been waiting there for quite a while! Without a word, I rushed him to the hospital. He was treated for frostbite on his hands. He'd need time to 35, and wouldn't come for class the next day, I thought.

The next morning, one of the first to 36 was my little frostbitten boy. Not only did he run in with energy, but his 37 could be heard as loud as ever! I gave him a warm hug and told him how 38 I was to see him. His words have stayed with me all these years, "I knew you would open the door."

That cold Monday morning, he waited a long, long while for adults to 39. To a child, every minute feels like forever. He didn't attempt to walk back home; he waited and trusted. This five-year-old taught me a powerful lesson in 40.

that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 21-25 are based on the following passage.

Are all your photographs good? Be honest with yourself. Aren't some of your pictures too dark, and others too light? How many times have you thrown away a photo? We, the Fine Photograph Club, can help you. We meet every Wednesday in our comfortable club room in Bridge Street. At 7:30 p.m., a member of the club or a visitor would give a talk, and then we have coffee. Our members will advise you on all the latest cameras and films. They will help you to develop your films or enlarge your pictures. What does it all cost? Only 5 pounds a year.

Photography is now a big business. Do you know, for instance, that there are 15 million cameras in our country? And that 700 million photographs are taken a year, more than one-third of them in color? Think of the amount of photography in television, the cinema, newspapers, books, advertisements and so on. In modern life people learn a lot from pictures. So photography is more and more important. It is also more complicated and more expensive than it used to be. You may only want to take good photographs of faces and places. If so, we can help you to get better results. You needn't waste any more money. If you want to learn more about photography and how it is used, join the club please. You won't be disappointed. Write now to the Secretary, Fine Photograph Club, Bridge Street.

21. The purpose of passage is to _____.

- A. show people how to take fine pictures
B. tell people photography is now a big business
C. tell people the club can do many things for you
D. encourage people to join the photograph club
22. If you want to join the club, you _____.
A. must be good at photography
B. must know about the latest cameras and films
C. must pay a little money a year
D. must be honest with yourself
23. You are able to be honest so that you can _____.
A. say if your photos are good or bad

- B. tell how much money you waste
C. help the Fine Photograph Club
D. know the latest development in cameras

24. The club can give the following service except _____.

- A. coffee B. amusement
C. advice D. information

25. Which statement of the following is true?

- A. If you are a member of Fine Photograph Club, it will cost you only 5 pounds to buy a camera.
B. All the members of Fine Photograph Club can take free photographs of faces and places.
C. More than one-third of the 700 million photographs taken each year are in color.
D. If you write to the photograph club, you will be very good at photographing.

Passage 2

Questions 26-30 are based on the following passage.

Did you take part in a camp this summer? There are so many summer camps and not all of them are the same. To choose which camp is best for you, first you must do a bit of research. Maybe you've never thought about it before, but every great summer camp has the same main goals—opportunity, challenge and growth.

Opportunity means you are given a chance to do something special. It also makes you special because other kids don't have the same opportunity. For example, if you are interested in writing, then you can choose to join a journalism camp. You may have the opportunity of meeting famous journalists there.

Challenge means you are given a task. You must finish the task and succeed in dealing with the challenge. Then you will have a sense of achievement. For example, you could take a lifeguard course at some summer camps. If you pass the exam, then you will receive a certificate to become a real lifeguard.

This also leads to the third and most important goal of very great summer camp—personal growth. It doesn't mean growing taller and stronger or more beautiful. It means seeing yourself improve, learning something new and doing something you didn't know or believe you could do before. It also means becoming more confident in yourself. So in the future when choosing your next summer camp, remember to ask yourself: Is it a special opportunity? Is it a challenge? Will I grow?

But what about friendship, fun and joy? These will all happen naturally when you have the right goals at summer camps!

26. Which is the writer's opinion?

- A. Different camps have different goals.
B. There are too many summer camps today.
C. All great summer camps have the same main goals.
D. All the summer camps offer the same activities and courses.

27. According to the passage, a camper feels successful when he _____.

- A. joins the best camp
B. finishes a hard task
C. grows taller and stronger
D. takes a special chance

28. The most important thing for a camper is to _____.

- A. take opportunities
B. grow more beautiful
C. become better and more confident
D. learn new life-saving skills

29. What does the last paragraph tell us?

- A. It's not important to have fun at a camp.
B. It's hard to make real friends at a camp.
C. You can get more joy with more goals at camp.
D. With the right goals, you can have fun while learning at a camp.

30. Which is the best title for the passage?

- A. What Makes a Camp Great?
B. Which Is the Best Goal?
C. How to Be a Successful Camper?
D. How to Do Research Work?

V. Cloze (20 points)

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

I grew up in a house where my mother did not trust my sisters and me to manage our own appearance. As a result, there were 31, and fashion was largely ignored.

However, two years ago, I was home for a visit when my mom, in her early 70s, called me into her bedroom. "I don't know what to wear", she 32: "You girls always look so good." I looked at her, wondering if I'd misunderstood. "What do you mean?" I asked her, "You know what to wear."

"No, I don't. She answered. "Can you pick something for me?" She repeated the question again. I was so 33 and couldn't believe my ears.

This was the same woman who had told my younger sister she wasn't allowed to wear a pair of ripped jeans; the same woman who, in high school, called me while I was out at a party to ask if my hair was up. "Don't do that, because you look 34 with your hair down." she told me, before I could 35

Suddenly, I realized that my mother—always so strong not only wanted my opinion 36 needed it. I pulled a pair of blue jeans from the closet. "This 37 your black shoes perfectly." I told her. She did. My mother certainly doesn't need anyone to take care of her. In fact, she still looks after my grandmother who lives with her. But with that 38, my mother and I started the role reversal that happens with all parents and all children, from caregiver to receiver.

Now, if I'm visiting or we're together, it's 39 for her to wear anything without asking me for advice first. I'm still always a bit surprised by the admission of her uncertainty. But every so often, it seems like she asks me just to be able to disagree with my answer and pick out something on her own instead. And 40 she does, I just tell her what I think of the way she looks. Sometimes it's "great", and sometimes it's "awful".
