III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 Points)

Directions: There are three passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage

People travel for a lot of reasons. Some tourists go to see battlefields or religious shrines, others are looking for culture, or simply want to have their pictures taken in front of famous places. European tourists are looking for a sunny beach to lie on.

Northern Europeans are willing to pay a lot of money and put up with a lot of inconveniences for the sun because they have so little of it. Residents of cities like London, Copenhagen, and Amsterdam spend a lot of their winter in the dark because the days are so short, and much of the rest of the year in the rain. This is the reason the Mediterranean has always attracted them. Every summer, more than 25 million people travel to Mediterranean resorts and beaches for their vacation. They all come for the same reason: sun!

The huge crowds mean lots of money for the economies of Mediterranean countries. Italy's 30,000 hotels are booked every summer. And 13 million people camp out on French beaches, parks, and roadsides. Spain's long sandy coastline attracts more people than anywhere else. 37 million tourists visit yearly, or one tourist for every person living in Spain.

But there are signs that the area is getting more tourism than it can handle. The Mediterranean is already one of the most polluted seas on earth. And with increased tourism, it's getting worse. The French can't figure out what to do with all the garbage left by campers around St. Tropez. And in many places, swimming is dangerous because of pollution.

None of this, however, is spoiling anyone's fun. The Mediterranean gets more popular every year with tourists. Obviously, they don't go there for clean water and solitude. They tolerate traffic jams and seem to like crowded beaches. They don't even mind the pollution. No matter how dirty the water is, the coastline still looks beautiful. And as long as the sun shines, it's still better than in the cold rain in Berlin, London, or Oslo.

11. The writer seems to imply that Europeans travel mostly for the reason that

- A. they want to see historic remains or religious spots
- B. they are interested in different cultural traditions and social customs
- C. they would like to take pictures in front of famous sites
- D. they wish to escape from the cold, dark and rainy days back at home

12. In paragraph 2, cities like London, Copenhagen, and Amsterdam are mentioned _____.

- A. to show that they are not good cities in terms of geography and climate
- B. to tell us how wealthy their residents are
- C. to suggest that these cities lack places of historic interest and scenic beauty
- D. to prove that they have got more tourism than they can handle

13. According to the passage, which of the following countries attracts more tourists than the others?

- A. Italy.
- B. Spain.
- C. France.
- D. Greece.

14. The latter half of the last sentence in paragraph 3, i. e., "or one tourist for every person living in Spain" means _____.

- A. all the 37 million people living in Spain are tourists
- B. every year almost as many tourists visit Spain as there are people living in that country
- C. every person living in Spain has to take care of a tourist
- D. every Spanish is visited by a tourist every year

15. Which of the following factors might spoil the tourists' fun at Mediterranean resorts and beaches?

- A. Polluted water.
- B. Crowded buses.
- C. Traffic jams.
- D. Rainy weather.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage

Marta Garcia is a high school senior. In the past years she has been working on a variety of projects. The projects are part of her work with Techbridge, a nonprofit organization. Techbridge was set up in 2000 to increase the number of women in science, technology, engineering and math (STEM). It offers a range of after-school activities for students.

Techbridge focuses on learning by doing. It attracts Marta's interest. "When I was a kid," says Marta, "I wasn't into English. I was really into technology and math. My older sister was in Techbridge. She encouraged me to join! It was something for me to do after school. I found it pretty fun."

Marta has created a complex music-making machine. Her latest project is a digital piano, which shows how far her STEM skills have advanced. Marta's instructors have been following her progress closely. "I've seen her master STEM skills," says Techbridge CEO Linda Kekelis, "She's very confident to face challenges. She isn't afraid of temporary setbacks."

Marta plans to attend Smith College this fall. She is still drawn to math and technology. But she does not want to be limited to one particular course of study.

"I'm not sure what I want to do after college graduation," says Marta. "I know a STEM career is an option." The future will be filled with jobs that require STEM skills. So her love of technology and her experience with Techbridge will serve her well.

16. Techbridge was set up to _____.

- A. train women teachers B. offer jobs for students
C. teach STEM at school D. help girls learn STEM

17. Marta Garcia works with Techbridge to _____.

- A. develop her interest B. finish her education

Questions 21- 30 are based on the following passage

Body language is the quiet, secret and most powerful language of all! It speaks louder than words. According to specialists, our bodies send out more 21 than we realize. In fact, non-verbal communication (非言语交际) takes up about 50% of what we really 22. And body language is 23 important when we attempt to communicate across 24. Indeed, what is called body language is so much a part of us that it's actually often unnoticed. And misunderstandings 25 as a result of it. For example, different societies treat the distance between people differently. Northern Europeans usually do not like having bodily 26 even with friends, and certainly not with strangers. People from Latin American countries on the other hand, touch each other quite a lot. Therefore, it's possible that in conversation, it may look like a Latino is following a Norwegian all over the room. The Latino, trying to 27 friendship, will keep moving closer. The Norwegian, very probably seeing this as pushiness, will keep backing away which the Latino will in return regard as 28.

Clearly, a great deal is going on when people talk. And only a part of it is in the words themselves. And when parties are from 29 cultures, there's a strong possibility of misunderstanding. But whatever the situation, the best advice is to 30 the Golden Rule: treat others as you would like to be treated.

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Geography is the study of the relationship between people and the land. Geographers (地理学家) compare and contrast 31 places on the earth. But they also go beyond the individual places and consider the earth as a whole. The word geography comes from two Greek words, ge, the Greek word for "earth" and graphein, 32 means "to write." The English word geography means "to describe the earth." some geography books focus on a small area like a town or city.

Others deal with a state, a region, a nation, or an 33 continent. Many geography books deal with the whole earth. Another way to divide the study of 34 is to distinguish between physical geography and cultural geography. The former focuses 35 the natural world; the latter starts with human beings and 36 how human beings and their environment act upon each other. But when geography is considered as a single subject, 37 branch can neglect the other. A geographer might be described as one who observes, records and explains the 38 between places. If all places 39 alike, there would be little need for geographers. We know, however, that no two places are exactly the same. Geography, then, is a point of view, a special way of looking 40 places.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are two passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Most Americans generally consider themselves to be frank, open, and direct in their dealings with other people. In their daily conversation, they may chat with each other in a more direct way. “Let’s lay our cards on the table.” They say. Or, “Let’s stop playing games and get to the point.” Unlike statements from other nations, these and many other phrases show the Americans’ idea that people should clearly state what they think and what they want.

Americans tend to believe that disagreements are best settled by means of long discussions among the people involved. If I dislike something you are doing, I should tell you about it directly so you will know clearly and from me personally, how I feel uneasy. For them, bringing in other people to solve the problem is regarded as somewhat strange. And the former will be looked upon as one who is not brave enough to speak directly to someone else.

Americans will often speak openly and directly to others about things they dislike. They will try to do so in a manner they call “constructive”, that is, a manner which the other person will not find offensive or unacceptable. If they do not speak openly about what is in their minds, they will often express their meanings in nonverbal (非语言的) ways (without words, but through facial expressions, body positions and gestures). They believe it is also a good way to show their feelings.

Americans are not taught, as people in many Asian countries are, that they should mask their feelings. Their words, the tone of their voices or their facial expressions will usually reveal when they are feeling angry, unhappy, confused, or happy and satisfied.

11. According to the passage, ____.

- A. Americans don’t state clearly what they think and want
- B. Americans use body language to defend other people
- C. Americans seldom speak openly
- D. Americans state clearly what they want

12. The statement “Let’s lay our cards on the table,” (Para. 1) is to show that ____.

- A. Americans like playing cards
- B. Americans are direct in expressing themselves
- C. Americans lay the cards down on the table and play
- D. playing cards is a way to show that Americans are frank

13. The phrase “constructive manner” (Para. 3) is closest in meaning to ____.

- A. an acceptable way to deal with others

B. an unacceptable way to deal with others

C. an offensive way to deal with others

D. a way that the others will find it strange

14. Which of the following is NOT a “nonverbal way”?

A. Sadness on one’s face.

B. The word “good”

C. The gesture “V”.

D. Body language.

15. What is the best title for the passage?

A. Americans Are Very Direct in Dealing with Others.

B. Americans Are Free People.

C. Americans Are Easy-going.

D. Americans Welcome People from Other Lands.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Most people, when they travel to space, would like to stay in orbit for a few days of more. And this stands to reason, if you’re paying $20,000 for your trip to orbit! Strain order for tourism to reach its full potential there’s going to be a need for orbital accommodation—or space hotels. What would a space hotel actually be like to visit? Hotels in orbit will offer the services you expect from a hotel—private rooms, meals, bars. But they’ll also offer two unique experiences: impressive views—of Earth and space—and the endless entertainment of living in zero gravity—including sports and other activities that make use of this.

The hotels themselves will vary greatly—from being quite simple in the early days to huge luxury structure at a later date. It’s actually surprising that as later as 1997, very few designs for space hotels were published. This is mainly because those who might be expected to design them haven’t expected launch costs to come down far enough to make them possible.

Lots of people who’ve been to space have described vividly what it’s like to live in zero gravity. There are obviously all sort of possibilities for dancing, gymnastics, and zero-G sports. Luckily, you don’t need to sleep much living in zero gravity, so you’ll have plenty of time for relaxing by hanging out in a bar with a window looking down at the turning Earth below.

Of course all good things have come to an end. Unfortunately, And so after a few days you'll find yourself heading back enough you'll be much more expert at exercising in zero gravity than you were when you arrived. You'll be thinking how soon you can save up enough to get back up again—or maybe you should change jobs to get to work in an orbiting hotel.

16. When traveling in space, most people would like to stay in orbit for a few days because ____.

- A. it is expensive to travel in space
- B. they would find the possible life in other star systems
- C. they could enjoy the luxury of space hotels
- D. they do not want to realize the full potential of tourism

17. Which of the following is a unique experience that space hotels will offer?

- A. The gravitational pull
- B. The special views.
- C. The relaxation in a bar
- D. The space walk.

18. Which of the following is not discussed in the passage?

- A. When was the space traveling made possible?
- B. What are the unique experiences that space hotels will offer?
- C. Why were there not many published designs for space hotels?
- D. How can the travelers enjoy themselves in space hotels?

19. You want to save up money to go back to space again because ____.

- A. you have changed jobs to get to work in an orbiting hotel
- B. you long for the exciting experience of the space
- C. you have been there before
- D. you do not want to live in zero gravity.

20. This passage is mainly about ____.

- A. traveling in space
- B. the ways of living in space hotels
- C. zero gravity and space hotels
- D. the description of space hotels

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with 10 blanks. You are required to select one word each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choice. Each choice in blank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter for each item on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

You probably have noticed that people express similar ideas in different ways, depending on the situation they are in. This is very natural. All languages have two general levels of usage: a formal level and an 21 level. English is no exception. The difference in these two levels is the 22 in which you use a particular level.

Formal language is the kind of 23 you find in textbooks, reference books, and in business letters. You would also 24 formal English in compositions and essays that you write in school. Informal language is used in conversation with 25, family members and friends, and when we write personal notes or letters to close friends. Formal language is 26 from informal language in several ways. First, formal language tends to be more polite. What we may find 27 is that it usually takes more words to be polite. For example, I might say to a friend or a family member, "Close the door, please." But to a stranger, I 28 would say, "Would you mind closing the door?"

Another difference between formal and informal language is some of the vocabulary. There are bound to be some words and phrases that belong in formal language and others are informal. Let's say that I really 29 soccer. If I'm talking to my friend, I might say "I'm just crazy about soccer!" But if I were 30 to my boss, I would probably say "I really enjoy soccer."

A. interesting	D. probably	G. usage	J. different	M. colleagues
B. language	E. use	H. talking	K. formal	N. difficult
C. like	F. college	I. situation	L. play	O. informal

IV. Cloze (20 points)

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

The computer is fast, and never makes a mistake, while people are too slow, and full of mistakes sometimes. That's 31 people often say when they talk about computers. For over a quarter of a century, scientists have been 32 better and better computers. Now a computer can do a lot of 33 jobs wonderfully. It is 34 used in factories, hospitals, post offices and airports. A computer can report, decide and control in almost 35 field. Many computer scientists are thinking of making the computer "think" like a man. With the help of a person, a computer can 36 pictures, write music, talk with people, play chess, recognize voices, translate languages and so on. Perhaps computers will one day really think and feel. Do you think the people will be afraid 37 they find that the computer is too clever to listen to and serve the people? No, people will 38 better use of the computers in the future. Man is 39 the master of the computer. The computer works only with the help of man. It cannot take the place 40 man.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Americans with small families own a small car or a large one. If both parents are working, they usually have two cars. When the family is large, one of the cars is sold and they will buy a van (住房汽车).

A small car can hold (容纳) four persons and a large car can hold six persons but it is very crowded (拥挤). A van hold seven persons easily, so a family with three children could ask their grandparents to go on a holiday to travel. They could all travel together.

Mr. Hagen and his wife had a third child last year. This made them sell a second car and buy a van. Their sixth and seventh seat are used to put other things, for a family of five must carry many suitcases (衣箱) when they travel. When they arrive at their grandparents' home, the suitcases are brought into the two seats, so they can then carry the grandparents.

Americans call vans motor homes. A motor home is always used for holidays. When a family are traveling to the mountains or to the seaside, they can live in their motor home for a few days or to the seaside, they can live in their motor home for a few days or weeks. All the members of a big family can enjoy a happier life when they are traveling together. That is why motor homes have become very popular. In America there are many parks for motor homes.

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

No one knows exactly how many disabled people there are in the world, but estimates suggest the figure is over 450 million. The number of disabled people in India alone is probably more than double the total population of Canada.

In the United Kingdom, about one in ten people have some disability. Disability is not just something that happens to other people: as we get older, many of us will become less mobile, hard of hearing or have failing eyesight.

Disablement can take many forms and occur at any time of life. Some people are born with disabilities. Many others become disabled as they get older. There are many progressive disabling diseases. The longer time goes on, the worse they become. Some people are disabled in accidents.

Many others may have a period of disability in the form of a mental illness. All are affected by people's attitude towards them.

Disabled people face many physical barriers. Next time you go shopping or to work or visit, friends, imagine how you would manage if you could not get up steps, or on to buses and trains. How would you cope if you could not see where you were going or could not hear the traffic? But there are other barriers: prejudice can be even harder to break down and ignorance inevitably represents by far the greatest barrier of all. It is almost impossible for the able-bodied to fully appreciate what the severely disabled go through, so it is important to draw attention to these barriers and show that it is the individual person and their ability, not their disability, which counts.

16. The first paragraph points out that _____.
A. there are many disabled people in the world
B. the number of disabled people in India is the greatest
C. India has much more disabled people than Canada
D. it is impossible to get an exact figure of the world's disabled people
17. The key word in paragraph four is _____.
A. disability
B. ignorance
C. prejudice
D. barriers
18. The last word of the passage "counts" most probably means _____.
A. is most important
B. is considered
C. is included
D. is numbered
19. Which of the following statements is not true?
A. even the able-bodied may lose some of their body functions when they get older.
B. there are about 10 percent disabled persons in the UK.
C. the whole society should pay due attention to the barriers faced by the disabled people
D. there still exists prejudice against the disabled which results mainly from ignorance
20. It can be concluded from the passage that _____.
A. we should try our best to prevent disablement
B. both physical and mental barriers are hard to break down
C. we just take a proper attitude towards the disabled
D. the able-bodied people will never fully understand the disabled

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with 10 blanks. You are required to select one word each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Whether it is at work or at home, we need just the right amount of challenges to keep us happy. When the challenges are too tough to 21, we feel stressed out and when we feel that challenge isn't challenge enough, we get easily 22. The secret to keep oneself happily engaged is to find a 23 in between these two extremes.

A state in which we feel 24 challenged is what we should look for. Such a state keeps us mentally and physically engrossed. When we lose ourselves in our activities, we achieve a sense of 25.

Work that keeps us well challenged helps us make our lives more interesting and 26. A lot of smart people do not mind continuing working at something they truly enjoy; even if that means they get a pay that is little less than 27. This also holds true for leisure activities. It is not 28 that the most expensive forms of relaxation provide that state of indulgence. Simple activities like gardening and socializing can keep one busy and entertained.

So find yourself a job that you'll enjoy doing or ask for a position that you think will help you achieve this. Make a small compromise on your salary if needed because you'll be much better off if you truly enjoy your work. Take up a 29 that you'll have fun doing. If you've been tired of 30 your free time on a particular activity like sitting in front of the TV, try something else challenging. Break the monotony by 31 your bike, shooting some baskets, visiting a library or inviting your friends for tea. III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are two passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

A recent survey shows that 25% of Internet users have done online banking through public Wi-Fi in the last three months. It also shows that 27% have bought a product or service with a credit card this way.

Experts worry that hackers (黑客) will take advantage of these practices. Doug Shadel said that hackers usually attack in two ways. They may create Wi-Fi hotspots that have the same name of the ones you trust, such as a hotel or a coffee shop. They may also provide a stronger Wi-Fi signal to get between you and the safe hotspot. In either case, the hackers can see your email, credit card information, user names and passwords. Sometimes hackers just set up their electronic traps near a business where people enjoy the free Wi-Fi. "In most cases they are after your personal information," Shadel said. "If you use the same user name and password for many accounts, they can get into them all. It's possible for any hacker to do it. The software to hack into a Wi-Fi network is available at little or no cost."

"It's difficult for people to know if a Wi-Fi network is safe," Shadel said. "So you should just think they are not. Any shared Internet access, free or paid, carries the same level of risk. It is safe only when you or someone you trust directly controls it."

Shadel sometimes checks email through public Wi-Fi. But he never does any banking that way. In an unfamiliar place, he uses a Virtual Private Network(VPN). "This service creates a passage between your device and a safe place on the Internet," he said.

11. A recent survey finds that 25% of Internet users use public Wi-Fi to _____.

- A. do banking
- B. buy things
- C. provide service
- D. play cards

12. The phrase "take advantage of" (Para. 2) can best be replaced by "_____".

- A. adjust to
- B. benefit from
- C. lead to
- D. result from

13. According to Shadel, any hacker can _____.

- A. create different passwords
- B. open an electronic account
- C. steal people's information
- D. write software for businesses

14. For the sake of safety, Internet users are advised to _____.

- A. test shared Internet access
- B. rely on paid Internet access
- C. look for free Internet access
- D. avoid shared Internet access

15. Shadel uses public Wi-Fi to _____.

- A. learn about VPN
- B. deal with his emails
- C. keep his account safe
- D. handle financial matters

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Home exercise is the new phenomenon in fitness. It's easy to see why more and more people are taking interest in home exercise.

All it takes to get results at home is an exercise mat, and some free weights. Even if you don't have these tools, there are several kinds of exercise you can do around the house. You can always try the exercise that uses your own body weight. The secret to success is to exercise the right way without hurting yourself.

At home, you can train at your own time. You are not affected by the timings of your gym or your trainer. This is an excellent solution for stay-at-home moms, and those individuals who work from home or have an irregular work schedule. With the number of tools available today, it is simple to set up a gym atmosphere in the comfort of your own home.

To get results at home, you need self-motivation and discipline, since you're going to be on your own. It's not as hard as you think and can be enjoyable and beneficial. When you are committed mentally to pursuing a leaner, energized and dynamic fitness level, changes happen much faster.

There're some other advantages home exercise has over a health club. After all, a club is a social institution. If one gets there to socialize more, he will exercise less. A club could also be crowded. Many people may wait in line for the equipment. With home exercise, there's no waiting period. So, many individuals are now exercising at home. In fact, as a recent study says, exercising at home is just as beneficial as working out at a health club. It also found that people who trained at home were more likely to stick with their program than those who exercised at a club.

16. A good aspect about home exercise is that it _____.

- A. causes no injury B. yields quick results
C. requires few tools D. takes little hard work

17. Home exercise best fits _____.

- A. housewives B. policewomen
C. office workers D. school children

18. To achieve the desired results from home exercise, you need to _____.

- A. enjoy yourself B. know its benefits
C. discipline yourself D. record your changes

19. People who go to health clubs are likely to _____.

- A. stick with their favorite programs
B. make better use of gym equipment
C. reap more gains from the training
D. spend much time making friends

20. This passage mainly talks about _____.

- A. types of home exercise
B. advantages of home exercise
C. ways to do home exercise
D. people fit for home exercise

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with 10 blanks. You are required to select one word each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choice. Each choice in blank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter for each item on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

Exercising for just 10 minutes a week is 21 to a longer life, according to a new study published in The British Journal of Sports Medicine.

Several recent studies have found that even low-intensity (低强度) exercise, done for a short amount of time, can have a meaningful 22 on health. Still, the idea that exercising for just 10 minutes a week may be enough to 23 your lifespan is novel. It's also somewhat controversial (有争议的), since the federal physical activity guidelines recommend getting at least 75 minutes of vigorous exercise or 150 minutes of moderate exercise each week.

The study was 24 on data from more than 88,000 U.S. adults who 25 in the National Health Interview Survey between 1997 and 2008.

Contrary to some research that has found an 26 limit to the amount of exercise that is healthy, the researchers found that there was 27 no limit to the longevity (长寿) benefits of exercise. Even the small group of people who got 10 times the amount of exercise recommended by the federal government had a 46% lower 28 of death than the least active group.

Still, observational studies like this one cannot prove cause and effect; they can only find patterns. The researchers also were not able to adjust for certain lifestyle factors that could affect lifespan, 29 dietary habits and changes in physical activity over time. Despite these 30, the study's results are yet another indication of the power of physical activity, even in small amounts.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are two passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Obviously it is meaningless in increasing your w.p.m. rate if you do not understand what you are reading. When you are consciously trying to increase your reading speed, stop after every chapter. If you are reading a novel, or stop every section or group of ten or twelve pages. If it is a textbook, and ask yourself a few questions about what you have been reading. If you find you have lost the clue of the story or you cannot remember clearly the details of what was said, re-read the section or chapter.

Try this from time to time. Take four or five pages of the general interest book you happen to be reading at the time. Read them as fast as you possibly can. Do not worry about whether you understand or not. Now go back and read them at what you feel to be your normal w.p.m. rate, the rate at which you can comfortably understand. After a lightning speed read through (probably about 600 w.p.m.), you will usually find that your normal speed has increased. This is the technique that players use when they habitually run further in training than they will have to on the day of the big race.

11. When you are reading a novel, the passage advises you to pause to check the content _____.

- A. every chapter
- B. every hour
- C. every three or four pages
- D. after every page

12. The purpose of pausing so often is to _____.

- A. rest the eyes
- B. make sure you have not missed any pages
- C. make sure you really understand what you have read
- D. prevent brain fatigue

13. If you have lost the clue of the story you are reading, the passage suggests _____.

- A. choosing an easier book
- B. glancing back over the chapter you have just read
- C. asking a friend to help you with the difficult words
- D. learning the previous chapter

14. The purpose of the lightning speed exercise is to _____.

- A. increase your normal speed by practicing at a very high rate
- B. get through the book in half the time so that you can go on to with the next
- C. help you understand more of the content of the book
- D. enable you to win reading races against your friends

15. The word "interest" in Paragraph 2 means _____.

- A. scary
- B. easy
- C. interesting
- D. important

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Goffin's cockatoos, a kind of small parrot native to Australasia, have been shown to have similar shape-recognition abilities to a human two-year-old. Though not known to use tools in the wild, the birds have proved skilful at tool use while kept in the cage. In a recent experiment, cockatoos were presented with a box with a nut inside it. The clear front of the box had a "keyhole" in a geometric shape, and the birds were given five differently shaped "keys" to choose from. Inserting the correct "key" would let out the nut.

In humans, babies can put a round shape in a round hole from around one year of age, but it will be another year before they are able to do the same with less symmetrical (对称的) shapes. This ability to recognize that a shape will need to be turned in a specific direction before it will fit is called an "allocentric frame of reference". In the experiment, Goffin's cockatoos were able to select the right tool for the job, in most cases, by visual recognition alone. Where trial-and-error was used, the cockatoos did better than monkeys in similar tests. This indicates that Goffin's cockatoos do indeed possess an allocentric frame of reference when moving objects in space, similar to two-year-old babies.

The next step, according to the researchers, is to try and work out whether the cockatoos rely entirely on visual clues (线索), or also use a sense of touch in making their shape selections.

16. How did the cockatoos get the nut from the box in the experiment?

- A. By following instructions.

- B. By using a tool.
C. By turning the box around.
D. By removing the lid.

17. Which task can human one-year-olds most likely complete according to the text?

- A. Using a key to unlock a door.
B. Telling parrots from other birds.
C. Putting a ball into a round hole.
D. Grouping toys of different shapes.

18. What is the meaning of “allocentric frame of reference” _____.

- A. A kind of tool
B. A kind of ability
C. A specific direction
D. a kind of shape

19. What does the follow-up test aim to find out about the cockatoos?

- A. How far they are able to see.
B. How they track moving objects.
C. Whether they are smarter than monkeys.
D. Whether they use a sense of touch in the test.

20. Which can be a suitable title for the text?

- A. Cockatoos: Quick Error Checkers
B. Cockatoos: Independent Learners
C. Cockatoos: Clever Signal-Readers
D. Cockatoos: Skilful Shape-Sorters

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

We all know how important human life is—it's priceless. It doesn't matter where you are from or what the color of your skins is—all people are human beings. Firstly, we can tell you that the lives of your relatives could depend on your ability to give first aid. If you think highly of human's life, this website is for you! Here you can find information about first aid.

The very first thing that you should do when you see an accident is to evaluate the situation and prevent further dangerous incidents. First of all, you have to recognize what has happened and what the dangers to rescuers and victims are. Think about how to take care of the victims.

Helping usually takes place in very difficult conditions and injuries can be very bad. Therefore, you cannot be too afraid of making mistakes to help. Sometimes you have to face the fact that regardless of your actions and your efforts the victim's condition might not improve—he or she could even die. In some cases even professional medical aid may not succeed. If you have done everything you think you should do, you shouldn't feel guilty.

Do not expose yourself to danger. Giving first aid can be dangerous. While trying to help a victim, do not forget about your own safety. If something happens to you, you won't be able to help anyone.

Call for help after you find out the condition of a victim. But remember if a victim faints due to breathing failure caused by drowning, choking or poisoning, you should first take actions that help to bring back the heart beat and breathing. While calling, talk shortly but clearly. Always provide the following information: the location of the accident, the kind of accident, the number of the injured and your full name and phone number and so on.

11. The underlined word "evaluate" in Paragraph 2 is closest in meaning to _____.

- A. leave
B. protect
C. avoid
D. judge

12. What's the main idea of Paragraph 3?

- A. You should learn some professional knowledge about first aid.
B. You shouldn't feel guilty if you don't know about first aid.
C. Try your best to give first aid and don't be afraid of making mistakes
D. Don't make mistakes when you are giving first aid.

13. The author thinks that helping a victim can be _____.

- A. risky
B. shocking
C. exciting
D. boring

14. It can be inferred from the passage that _____.

- A. everyone must learn how to give first aid
B. you should forget about your own safety while giving first aid.
C. when you see an accident you should do nothing but call the police.
D. when calling for help you should give all relevant details.

15. The passage is probably taken from _____.

- A. a newspaper
B. the Internet
C. a textbook
D. a guide book

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

For any Englishman, there can never be any discussion as to who is the world's greatest dramatist (剧作家). Only one name can possibly suggest itself to him: that of William Shakespeare. Every Englishman has some knowledge, however slight, of the work of our greatest writer. All of us use words, phrases and quotations from Shakespeare's writings that have become part of the common property of the English-speaking people. Most of the time we are probably unaware of the source of the words we used, rather like the old lady who was taken to see a performance of Hamlet and complained that it was full of well-known proverbs and quotations.

Shakespeare, more perhaps than any other writer, made full use of the great resources of the English language. Most of us use about five thousand words in our normal use of English; Shakespeare in his works used about twenty-five thousand.

There is probably no better way for a foreigner to appreciate the richness and variety of the English language than by studying the various ways in which Shakespeare used it. Such a study is well worth the effort (it is not, of course, recommended to beginners), even though some aspects of English usage, and the meaning of many words, have changed since Shakespeare's day.

16. English people _____.

- A. have never discussed who is the world's greatest dramatist
B. never discuss any issue concerning the world's greatest dramatist
C. are sure who is the world's greatest dramatist
D. do not care who is the world's greatest poet and dramatist

17. Every Englishman knows _____.

- A. more or less about Shakespeare
- B. Shakespeare, but only slightly
- C. all Shakespeare's writings
- D. only the name of the greatest English writer

18. Which of the following is true _____

- A. We use all the words, phrases and quotations from Shakespeare's writings.
- B. Shakespeare's writings have become the property of those who are learning to speak English.
- C. It is likely to be true that people often do not know the origins of the words they use
- D. All the words people use are taken from the writings of Shakespeare

19. What does the word "proverb" mean _____

- A. Familiar sayings
- B. Shakespeare's plays
- C. Complaints
- D. Actors and actresses

20. Why is it worthwhile to study the various ways in which Shakespeare used English?

- A. English words have changed a lot since Shakespeare's time
- B. By doing so one can be fully aware of the richness of the English language
- C. English words are now being used in the same way as in Shakespeare's time
- D. Beginners may have difficulty learning some aspects of English usage

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are two passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Regular exercise is essential for maintaining good health and a positive lifestyle. Even 30 minutes of physical activity each day can bring significant benefits, such as improving heart function, boosting mood, and increasing energy levels. Walking, jogging, or cycling are great ways to start, as they require little equipment and can be done anywhere.

Exercise also helps with weight management by burning calories and building muscle. Studies show that people who exercise regularly are less likely to develop chronic diseases like diabetes and high blood pressure. Additionally, physical activity releases endorphins, which are natural chemicals in the brain that reduce stress and make you feel happier.

For those new to exercise, it's important to start slowly and gradually increase intensity. Finding an activity you enjoy, such as dancing or swimming, can make it easier to stay consistent. Setting small goals, like walking 10,000 steps a day or completing a 30-minute workout three times a week, can help you stay motivated and track progress.

Incorporating exercise into your daily routine doesn't have to be complicated. Simple changes, like taking the stairs instead of the elevator or doing stretching exercises while watching TV, can add up to a healthier lifestyle over time. Remember, the key is to stay active and make movement a regular part of your day.

11. How long should you exercise daily for benefits?

- A. 10 minutes
- B. 20 minutes
- C. 30 minutes
- D. 60 minutes

12. What do endorphins do?

- A. Increase stress
- B. Reduce happiness
- C. Burn calories
- D. Improve mood

13. The phrase "track progress" in paragraph 3 means _____.

- A. stop exercising
- B. measure improvement
- C. ignore results
- D. change goals

14. What is a simple way to incorporate exercise?

- A. Take the elevator
- B. Watch TV all day
- C. Do stretching while watching TV
- D. Avoid stairs

15. What's the main idea of the passage?

- A. The dangers of no exercise
- B. How to lose weight quickly
- C. The importance and ways of daily exercise
- D. Why to stay at home

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Bees play a vital role in maintaining Earth's ecosystems. As pollinators, they help plants reproduce by transferring pollen from one flower to another. This process is essential for the growth of fruits, vegetables, and nuts, which form a large part of human and animal diets. In fact, nearly 75% of the world's crops depend on pollinators like bees.

However, bee populations are declining rapidly due to habitat loss, pesticides, and climate change. This decline threatens global food security and biodiversity. Without bees, many plants would struggle to reproduce, leading to a chain reaction that affects entire ecosystems. For example, fewer bees could mean less food for birds and small mammals, disrupting the food chain.

To protect bees, individuals and communities can take simple steps. Planting bee-friendly flowers like sunflowers and lavender provides them with nectar and pollen. Reducing the use of harmful pesticides in gardens and farms also helps create a safer environment for these insects. Additionally, supporting local beekeepers by buying local honey can contribute to bee conservation efforts.

Understanding the importance of bees and taking action to protect them is crucial for preserving our planet's natural balance. Every small effort counts in ensuring these tiny but essential creatures continue to thrive.

16. What is the main role of bees?

- A. Producing honey
- B. Pollinating plants
- C. Controlling pests
- D. Improving soil quality

17. Why are bee populations declining?

- A. Overeating
- B. Habitat loss and pesticides
- C. Too many flowers
- D. Increased biodiversity

18. The phrase "chain reaction" in paragraph 2 means _____.

- A. a series of connected events
- B. a single event
- C. a positive effect
- D. a natural disaster

19. How can individuals help bees?

- A. Plant bee-friendly flowers
- B. Use more pesticides
- C. Cut down trees
- D. Ignore local beekeepers

20. What's the purpose of the passage?

- A. To explain why bees are declining
- B. To promote honey production
- C. To highlight the importance of bee conservation
- D. To discuss climate change

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Natalie Doan, 14, has always felt lucky to live in Rockaway, New York. Living just a few blocks from the beach, Natalie can see the ocean and hear the wave from her house. "It's the ocean that makes Rockaway so special," she says.

On October 29, 2012, that ocean turned fierce. That night, Hurricane Sandy attacked the East Coast, and Rockaway was hit especially hard. Fortunately, Natalie's family escaped to Brooklyn shortly before the city's bridge closed.

When they returned to Rockaway the next day, they found their neighborhood in ruins. Many of Natalie's friends had lost their homes and were living far away. All around her, people were suffering, especially the elderly. Natalie's school was so damaged that she had to temporarily attend a school in Brooklyn.

In the following few days, the men and women helping Rockaway recover inspired Natalie. Volunteers came with carloads of donated clothing and toys. Neighbors devoted their spare time to helping others rebuild. Teenagers climbed dozens of flights of stairs to deliver water and food to elderly people trapped in powerless high-rise buildings.

"My mom tells me that I can't control what happens to me," Natalie says. "but I can always choose how I deal with it."

Natalie's choice was to help.

She created a website page matching survivors in need with donors who wanted to help. Natalie posted introduction about a boy named Patrick, who lost his baseball card collecting when his house burned down. Within days, Patrick's collection was replaced.

In the coming months, her website page helped lots of kids: Christopher, who received a new basketball; Charlie, who got a new keyboard. Natalie also worked with other organizations to bring much-needed supplies to Rockaway. Her efforts made her a famous person. Last April, she was invited to the White House and honored as a Hurricane Sandy Champion of Change.

Today, the scars (创痕) of destruction are still seen in Rockaway, but hope is in the air. The streets are clear, and many homes have been rebuilt. "I can't imagine living anywhere but Rockaway," Natalie declares. "My neighborhood will be back, even stronger than before."

11. Which of the following is true?

- A. Natalie is living far from the beach
- B. Rockaway was hit slightly
- C. Hurricane Sandy attacked the East Coast in the evening
- D. Natalie's family failed to escape before the city's bridge closed

12. When Natalie returned to Rockaway after the hurricane, she found _____.

- A. some friends had lost their lives
- B. her neighborhood was destroyed
- C. her school had moved to Brooklyn
- D. the elderly were free from suffering

13. According to paragraph 4, who inspired Natalie most?

- A. The people helping Rockaway rebuild
- B. The people trapped in high rise building
- C. The volunteers donating money to survivors
- D. Local teenagers bringing clothing to elderly people

14. How did Natalie help the survivors?

- A. She gave her toys to the kids
- B. She took care of younger children
- C. She called on the White House to help
- D. She built an information sharing platform

15. What does the story intend to tell us?

- A. Little people can make a big difference

- B. A friend in need is a friend indeed
- C. East or West, home is best
- D. Technology is power

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

California condors are North America's largest birds, with wing-length of up to 3 meters. In the 1980s, electrical lines and lead poisoning (铅中毒) nearly drove them to dying out. Now, electric shock training and medical treatment are helping to rescue these big birds.

In the late 1980s, the last few condors were taken from the wild, and there are now more than 150 flying over California and nearby Arizona, Utah and Baja in Mexico.

Electrical lines have been killing them off. "As they go in to rest for the night, they just don't see the power lines," says Bruce Ride out of San Diego Zoo. Their wings can bridge the gap between lines, resulting in electrocution (电死) if they touch two lines at once.

So scientists have come up with a shocking idea. Tall poles, placed in large training areas, teach the birds to stay clear of electrical lines by giving them a painful but undeadly electric shock. Before the training was introduced, 66% of set-free condors died of electrocution. This has now dropped to 18%.

Lead poisoning has proved more difficult to deal with. When condors eat dead bodies of other animals containing lead, they absorb large quantities of lead. This affects their nervous systems and ability to produce baby birds, and can lead to kidney (肾) failures and death. So condors with high levels of lead are sent to Los Angeles Zoo, where they are treated with calcium EDTA, a chemical that removes lead from the blood over several days. This work is starting to pay off. The annual death rate for adult condors has dropped from 38% in 2000 to 5.4% in 2011.

Ride out's team thinks that the California condors' average survival time in the wild is now just under eight years. "Although these measures are not effective forever, they are vital for now," he says. "They are truly good birds that are worth every effort we put into recovering them."

16. California condors attract researchers' interest because they _____.

- A. are active at night
- B. had to be bred in the wild

- C. are found on in California
- D. almost died out in the 1980s

17. Researchers have found electrical lines are _____

- A. blocking condors' journey home
- B. big killers of California condors
- C. rest places for condors at night
- D. used to keep condors away

18. Which of the following is not true?

- A. Lead poisonous has proved more difficult to do
- B. Condors absorb lead because they eat dead bodies which containing lead
- C. EDTA can remove lead from the blood over several days
- D. The annual death rate for adult condors has dropped to 38% in 2011.

19. According to Paragraph 5, lead poisoning _____

- A. makes condors too nervous to fly
- B. has little effect on condors' kidneys
- C. can hardly be gotten rid of from condors' blood
- D. makes it different for condors to produce baby birds

20. The passage shows that _____

- A. the average survival time of condors is satisfactory
- B. Ride out's research interest lies in electric engineering
- C. the efforts to protect condors have brought good results
- D. researchers have found the final answers to the problem

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with 10 blanks. You are required to select one word each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choice. Each choice in blank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter for each item on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

What determines the kind of person you are? What factors make you more or less bold, intelligent, or able to read a map? All of these are influenced by the interaction of your genes and the environment in which you were 21. The study of how genes and environment interact to influence 22 activity is known as behavioral genetics. Behavioral genetics has made important 23 to the biological revolution, providing information about the extent to which biology influences mind, brain and behavior.

Any research that suggests that 24 to perform certain behaviors are based in biology is controversial. Who wants to be told that there are limitations to what you can 25 based on something that is beyond your control, such as your genes? It is easy to accept that genes control physical characteristics such as sex, race and eye color. But can genes also determine whether people will get divorced, how 26 they are, or what career they are likely to choose? A concern of psychological scientists is the 27 to which all of these characteristics are influenced by nature and nurture (养育), by genetic makeup and the environment. Increasingly, science 28 that genes lay the groundwork for many human traits. From this perspective, people are born 29 like undeveloped photographs: The image is already captured, but the way it 30 appears can vary based on the development process. However, the basic picture is there from the beginning.

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the center.

One night, when I was eight, my mother gently asked me a question I would never forget. "Sweetie, my company wants to 31 me but needs me to work in Brazil. This is like your teacher telling that you've done 32 and allowing you to skip a grade (跳级), but you'll have to 33 your friends. Would you say yes to your teacher?" She gave me a hug and asked me to think about it. I was puzzled. The question 34 me wondering for the rest of the night I had said "yes" but for the first time, I realized the 35 decisions adults had to make.

For almost four years, my mother would call us from Brazil every day. Every evening I had 36 wait for the phone to ring and then tell her every detail of my day. A phone call, however, could never replace her 37 and it was difficult not to feel lonely at times.

During my fourth-grade Christmas break, we flew to Rio to visit her. Looking at her large 38 apartment, I became 39 how lonely my mother must have been in Brazil herself. It was then 40 I started to appreciate the tough choices she had to make on balancing family and work.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Artificial Intelligence, or AI, refers to machines or computers that can perform tasks that typically require human intelligence. This includes things like recognizing speech, solving problems, and making decisions. AI is already part of daily life, from voice assistants like Siri to recommendation systems on streaming platforms.

One common type of AI is machine learning, where computers learn from data to improve their performance. For example, a spam filter learns to recognize unwanted emails by analyzing patterns in thousands of messages. Another type is natural language processing, which allows computers to understand and respond to human language, as seen in chatbots or translation tools.

While AI offers many benefits, such as increased efficiency and new medical advancements, it also raises concerns. Some worry that AI could replace human jobs, especially in industries like manufacturing and customer service. There are also ethical questions about how AI is used, such as issues with privacy and bias in decision-making.

As AI continues to develop, it's important to understand its basics and consider both its potential and challenges. Balancing innovation with responsible use will be key to harnessing AI's full benefits.

11. What is AI?

- A. Human intelligence
- C. Only voice assistants

- B. Machines that mimic human tasks
- D. Traditional computers

12. How does machine learning work?

- A. By ignoring data
- C. By copying human decisions

- B. By learning from data to improve
- D. By making random choices

13. The word "concerns" in paragraph 3 means _____.

- A. advantages
- C. worries

- B. technologies
- D. advancements

14. What is a concern about AI?

- A. Job replacement
- C. Medical advancements

- B. Improved efficiency
- D. Better privacy

15. What's the author's advice about AI?

- A. Avoid using AI
- B. Focus only on benefits
- C. Balance innovation and responsible use
- D. Ignore ethical issues

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Acting is such an over-crowded profession that the only advice that should be given to a young person thinking of going on the stage is "Don't!". But it is useless to try to discourage someone who feels that he must act, although the chances of his becoming famous are slim. The normal way to begin is to go to a drama school. Usually only students who show promise and talent are accepted, and the course lasts two years. Then the young actor or actress takes up work with a theatrical company (剧团), usually as an assistant stage manager. This means doing everything that there is to do in the theatre and occasionally acting in very small parts. It is very hard work indeed, the hours are long and the salary is tiny.

Of course, some people have remarkable chances which lead to fame and success without this long and hard training. Connie Pratt, for example, was just an ordinary girl working in a bicycle factory. A film producer happened to catch sight of her one morning waiting at a bus stop, as he drove past in his car. He stopped and got out to speak to the girl. He asked if she would like to go to the film studio to do a test, and she thought he was joking. Then she got angry and said she would call the police. It took the producer twenty minutes to convince Connie that he was serious. The test was successful. And within a few weeks she was playing the leading part opposite one of the most famous actors of the day. But chances like this happen once in a blue moon.

16. From the very beginning, the author puts it clearly that acting is a profession _____.

- A. sought after by too many
- B. too difficult for young people
- C. for slim people only
- D. one can go into without special training

17. For someone who feels he must act, it is very likely that _____.

- A. he will become a film star at long last
- B. he will become a stage manager
- C. he will be well paid
- D. he will end up without any success

18. The film producer found Connie Pratt one morning when she was _____.

- A. at work in a bicycle factory
- B. driving past him in her car
- C. going to a film studio
- D. waiting for a bus

19. A few weeks after the test, Connie Pratt found herself _____.

- A. the most famous actress of the world
- B. playing the leading female role in a play
- C. as famous as the greatest actor of the world
- D. no less famous than the leading actor of the day

20. The concluding sentence "chances like this happen once in a blue moon" means _____.

- A. this is something which happens once in a while
- B. this is a highly profitable chance
- C. this is something highly possible
- D. this is a very rare chance

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section there is a passage with ten blanks. You are required to select one word for each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Successful people in international business understand the cultures of other countries and learn to change their practices in different cultures. They understand the importance of 21 business decisions based on misconceptions (误解) —mistaken ideas.

One cause of misconceptions is ethnocentrism (民族中心主义), the belief that one's own culture's way is better than the way of other 22. To avoid ethnocentrism, it's 23 to study the different elements (组成部分) of culture: language, values and attitudes, and customs and manners.

Language

A knowledge of the local language can 24 international business people in four ways. First, people can communicate directly. Second, people are usually more open in their communication. Third, an understanding of the 25 allows people to infer (推断) meanings that are not said directly. Finally, 26 knowing the language helps people to understand the culture better.

Values and attitudes

Values are people's basic beliefs about the 26 between right and wrong, good and bad. Values and 27 influence international business. For example, many people in the United States believe that chocolate from Switzerland is 28 than chocolate from other countries.

Customs and manners

Customs are 29 practices. For example, in the United States, it is the custom to have salad (色拉) before the main course at dinner. And it's not acceptable to talk with 30 in mouth at table.

People who speak or perform before the public sometimes may suffer from "Stage Fright". Stage fright makes a person nervous. In that case, it can make one's mind go blank and forget 31 one ought to say, or to act. Actors, musicians, dancers, lawyers, 32 radio show hosts suffered from stage fright at one time or another.

Diana Nichols is an expert in helping people free from stage fright at a medical center in New York City. She helps actors learn to 33 themselves. Miss Nichols says some people have always been afraid to perform before the audience. Others, she says, develop stage fright after a(n) tearful experience.

She offers them ways to control the fear. One way is to smile 34 going onto the stage. Taking two deep breaths also helps. Deep breathing helps you 35 control of your body.

Miss Nichols persuades her patients to tell themselves that their speech or performance does not have to be 36. It's all right to make a mistake. She tells them they should not be too nervous while they are performing. It is important that they should continue to perform while she is telling them. After each performance, they discuss what happened and find out what 37 helped and what did not. As they perform more and more, they will fear less and less as much as 50%. Miss Nichols says the aim is only to reduce stage fright, not to smooth it away 38. This is 39 a little stage fright makes a person more careful, and 40 the performance.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Language learning begins with listening. Children are greatly different in the amount of listening they do before they start speaking, and later starters are often long listeners. Most children will "obey" spoken instructions some time before they can speak, though the word "obey" is hardly accurate as a description of the eager and delighted cooperation usually shown by the child. Before they can speak, many children will also ask questions by gesture and by making questioning noises.

Any attempt to study the development from the noises babies make to their first spoken words leads to considerable difficulties. It is agreed that they enjoy making noises, and that during the first few months one or two noises sort themselves as particularly expressive as delight, pain, friendliness, and so on. But since these can't be said to show the baby's intention to communicate, they can hardly be regarded as early forms of language. It is agreed, too, that from about three months they play with sounds for enjoyment, and that by six months they are able to add new words to their store. This self-imitation (模仿) leads on to deliberate (有意的) imitation of sounds made or words spoken to them by other people. The problem then arises as to the point at which one can say that these imitations can be considered as speech.

It is a problem we need to get our teeth into. The meaning of a word depends on what a particular person means by it in a particular situation and it is clear that what a child means by a word will change as he gains more experience of the world. Thus the use at seven months of "mama" as a greeting for his mother cannot be dismissed as a meaningless sound simply because he also uses it at other times for his father, his dog, or anything else he likes. Playful and meaningless imitation of what other people say continues after the child has begun to speak for himself. I doubt, however, whether anything is gained when parents take advantage of this ability in an attempt to teach new sounds.

11. Before children start speaking _____.

- A. they need equal amount of listening
- B. they need different amounts of listening
- C. they are all eager to cooperate with the adults by obeying spoken instructions
- D. they can't understand and obey the adult's oral instructions

12. Children who start speaking late _____.

- A. may have problems with their listening
- B. probably do not hear enough language spoken around them
- C. usually pay close attention to what they hear
- D. often take a long time in learning to listen properly

13. A baby's first noises are _____.

- A. an expression of his moods and feelings
- B. an early form of language
- C. a sign that he means to tell you something
- D. an imitation of the speech of adults

14. The problem of deciding at what point a baby's imitations can be considered as speech _____.

- A. is important because words have different meanings for different people
- B. is not especially important because the changeover takes place gradually
- C. is one that should be properly understood because the meaning of words changes with age
- D. is one that should be completely ignored (忽略) because children's use of words is often meaningless

15. The speaker implies _____.

- A. parents can never hope to teach their children new sounds
- B. children no longer imitate people after they begin to speak
- C. children who are good at imitating learn new words more quickly
- D. even after they have learnt to speak, children still enjoy imitating

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

The Peales were a famous family of American artists. Charles Willson Peale is best remembered for his portraits of leading figures of the American Revolution. He painted portraits (肖像) of Franklin and Jefferson and over a dozen of George Washington. His life-size portrait of his sons Raphaëlle and Titian was so realistic that George Washington reportedly once tipped his hat to the figures in the picture.

Charles Willson Peale gave up painting in his middle age and devoted his life to the Peale museum, which he founded in Philadelphia. The world's first popular museum of art and natural science mainly covered paintings by Peale and his family as well as displays of animals in their natural settings. Peale found the animals himself and found a method to make the exhibits more lifelike. The museum's most popular display was the skeleton (骷髅) of a huge, extinct elephant, which Peale unearthed on a New York farm in 1801.

Three of Peale's seventeen children were also famous artists. Paphaelle Peale often painted still lives of flowers, fruit, and cheese. His brother Rembrandt studied under his father and painted portraits of many noted people, including one of George Washington. Another brother, Rubens Peale, painted mostly landscapes and portraits.

James Peale, the brother of Charles Willson Peale, specialized in miniatures (小画像). His daughter Sarah Miriam Peale was probably the first professional female portrait painter in America.

16. What is the main topic of the passage?

- A. The life of Charles Willson Peale.
- B. Portraits in the 18th century.
- C. The Peale Museum.
- D. A family of artists.

17. The author mentions in Paragraph 1 that Washington tipped his hat to the figures in the painting to show that _____.

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Online shopping has revolutionized the way people buy goods, offering convenience and a wide range of choices. With just a few clicks, consumers can purchase products from around the world and have them delivered to their doors. This has especially benefited busy individuals and those living in remote areas, who may have limited access to physical stores.

However, online shopping also poses challenges for traditional brick-and-mortar stores. Many small businesses struggle to compete with large online platforms like Amazon and Taobao, which often offer lower prices and faster delivery. This has led to closures of local shops, affecting local economies and community dynamics.

Despite these challenges, online shopping continues to grow. Retailers are adapting by creating online stores and improving delivery services. Some even offer "click-and-collect" options, allowing customers to order online and pick up items in person. This blend of online and offline shopping is becoming increasingly popular, balancing convenience with the benefits of physical stores.

As technology advances, online shopping is likely to become even more integrated into daily life. While it brings many advantages, it's important to support local businesses and find a balance between online and offline shopping.

11. What is a major advantage of online shopping?

- A. Higher prices
- B. Limited choices
- C. Convenience and wide choices
- D. Slower delivery

12. What problem do traditional stores face?

- A. Too many customers
- B. Competition from online platforms
- C. Improved delivery services
- D. Lower operating costs

13. The phrase "brick-and-mortar stores" in paragraph 2 refers to _____.

- A. online shops
- B. physical stores
- C. large supermarkets
- D. remote markets

14. How are retailers adapting to online shopping?

- A. Closing all physical stores
- B. Ignoring online trends
- C. Creating online stores and hybrid services
- D. Raising prices

15. What's the passage mainly about?

- A. The history of shopping
- B. The advantages and challenges of online shopping
- C. How to start an online business
- D. The decline of e-commerce

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

Bilingual education, where students learn in two languages, offers numerous cognitive and social benefits. Research shows that children exposed to multiple languages from an early age develop better problem-solving skills and mental flexibility. This is because switching between languages exercises the brain, enhancing its ability to focus and process information.

In bilingual classrooms, students often demonstrate higher levels of cultural awareness. They gain a deeper understanding of different traditions and perspectives, which prepares them for an increasingly globalized world. For example, a student learning both English and Spanish might better appreciate the literature and history of both cultures, fostering empathy and open-mindedness.

Bilingual education also improves academic performance. Studies indicate that bilingual students tend to score higher on standardized tests, particularly in reading and math. This is likely due to the enhanced cognitive skills developed through language learning, such as improved memory and logical reasoning.

While some argue that bilingual education can cause confusion, research consistently shows the opposite. Children are naturally adept at acquiring languages, and early exposure sets a foundation for lifelong language proficiency. Whether through immersion programs or dual-language classes, investing in bilingual education equips students with skills that will benefit them personally and professionally.

16. What do bilingual students develop?

- A. Poor problem-solving skills B. Mental flexibility
C. Limited focus D. Reduced creativity

17. How does bilingual education affect cultural awareness?

- A. Decreases it B. Increases it
C. Has no effect D. Causes confusion

18. The word "globalized" in paragraph 2 means _____.

- A. isolated B. connected worldwide
C. traditional D. local

19. What do studies show about bilingual students' test scores?

- A. Lower in reading B. Higher in math
C. No difference D. Lower in all subjects

20. What is the author's attitude toward bilingual education?

- A. Supportive B. Critical
C. Neutral D. Unclear

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Vocational education, or career and technical education (CTE), focuses on preparing students for specific trades and professions. Unlike traditional academic programs, it emphasizes hands-on training in fields like nursing, welding, automotive repair, and computer programming. This type of education is crucial for filling skilled labor gaps and providing alternative pathways for students who thrive in practical learning environments.

Vocational students often gain industry-specific certifications while still in school, making them attractive to employers. For example, a student in a nursing program might earn a Certified Nursing Assistant (CNA) certification, allowing them to start working immediately after graduation. This not only boosts their employability but also provides financial stability at an earlier age.

Contrary to the misconception that vocational education is “less valuable” than college, many vocational jobs offer high salaries and job security. Trades like electricians and plumbers are in constant demand, and skilled workers are essential for maintaining infrastructure and driving economic growth. Vocational education also promotes diversity in the workforce, ensuring that society has professionals in both white-collar and blue-collar roles.

Schools with strong vocational programs often partner with local businesses, providing students with internships and apprenticeships. This real-world experience allows them to apply classroom knowledge in practical settings, building confidence and competence. By recognizing the value of vocational education, societies can create a more balanced and resilient workforce.

11. How does vocational education differ from traditional academic programs?

- A. It focuses on theoretical knowledge rather than practical skills
- B. It prepares students for specific trades through hands-on training
- C. It requires longer study periods to obtain certifications
- D. It is only available to students with low academic performance

12. Why are industry certifications valuable for vocational students?

- A. They guarantee high-paying jobs immediately
- B. They demonstrate specialized skills to potential employers
- C. They replace the need for college degrees
- D. They are easier to obtain than academic qualifications

13. The passage challenges the misconception that vocational education is:_____.

- A. Essential for economic growth

B. Equivalent to college education

C. Inferior to academic programs

D. Beneficial for creative students

14. What role do local businesses play in vocational education?

- A. They provide funding for school programs
- B. They criticize the lack of practical training
- C. They offer internships and real-world experience
- D. They advocate for more classroom-based learning

15. What can be concluded about vocational jobs from the passage?

- A. They offer limited career growth opportunities
- B. They are less important than white-collar jobs
- C. They require both skill and professional certification
- D. They are unaffected by economic changes

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

The Day of the Dead (Día de los Muertos) is a Mexican holiday celebrated annually on November 1st and 2nd. Unlike traditional funerals, it is a joyous celebration of life and death, honoring deceased loved ones. Families create altars (ofrendas) decorated with marigold flowers, photos, and the favorite foods of the departed, believing their spirits return to visit during this time.

A key tradition is the creation of sugar skulls (calaveras de azúcar), intricately decorated with colorful icing and used as offerings. Pan de muerto (bread of the dead), a sweet bread shaped like bones, is another staple of the celebration. Children often participate in parades wearing skeleton costumes, dancing to music and spreading the message that death is a natural part of life.

The origins of the Day of the Dead date back to ancient Aztec traditions, which were later blended with Catholic influences. The Aztecs believed that the dead remained connected to the living, and this philosophy continues to shape the holiday's rituals. Today, it is a time for families to come together, share stories about the deceased, and celebrate their memories with love and laughter.

While the holiday has gained international attention, its core remains deeply rooted in Mexican culture. It teaches us to embrace mortality with joy rather than fear, celebrating the cycle of life in a way that is both vibrant and profound. The Day of the Dead is a beautiful reminder that love and memory transcend death.

16. How does the Day of the Dead differ from traditional funeral practices?

- A. It is a sorrowful event focused on loss
- B. It celebrates life and death with joy and rituals
- C. It is only observed by indigenous communities
- D. It avoids mentioning the deceased

17. What do families create during the holiday?

- A. Sand castles
- B. Ofrendas
- C. Snowmen
- D. Gingerbread houses

18. The word “intricately” in paragraph 2 means _____.

- A. simply
- B. cheaply
- C. complexly and beautifully
- D. quickly

19. What is the significance of children wearing skeleton costumes?

- A. To symbolize fear of death
- B. To educate about medical science
- C. To emphasize that death is a natural part of life
- D. To mimic historical figures

20. What can visitors learn about Mexican culture from the Day of the Dead?

- A. The importance of material wealth
- B. The acceptance of mortality and celebration of memories
- C. The decline of traditional rituals
- D. The influence of modern technology on festivals

Have you ever heard someone say that he can't see the forest for the trees? If so, you may have 31 what this curious phrase means. If you can see the trees, how is the forest not visible too?

This popular phrase accurately describes situations in 32 people sometimes get so caught up with the details that they lose sight of the big picture. 33, you're paying so much attention to the trees that you forget that the trees are just part of the larger forest.

This is a problem we all meet with from time to time. When observing our world, it's easy to focus on interesting details and ignore larger concepts. For 34, though, it's important to be able to focus on both the forest and the trees.

Since the 35 of scientific inquiry thousands of years ago, observations have been important. The first scientists used their senses to see, hear, smell, feel, and taste the world around them. Through these 36, they learned about their world and began to search for answers to the questions that naturally arose.

Today, scientists still rely upon their five senses to make observations. However, they also take advantage of modern 37 to make observations with a wide variety of tools. These enable them to "see" the world in ways beyond what their five senses allow.

From satellite telescopes to atomic microscopes (显微镜), 38 scientists use these tools to observe the world in ways never 39 by early scientists. Some of these tools allow them to 40 small details while others help them to see the big picture.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

The Carnival of Venice is one of the most iconic cultural events in Italy, attracting millions of visitors each year. Dating back to the 12th century, this vibrant festival celebrates life, creativity, and community before the Christian period of Lent. Unlike other carnivals, Venice's event is famous for its elaborate masks and costumes, which transform the city into a magical world of mystery and art.

The tradition of wearing masks originated as a way for people to interact freely without social judgment. In the past, both nobles and commoners could hide their identities, allowing for unrestricted communication and fun. Today, masks are crafted with intricate designs, often hand-painted with gold leaf or gemstones. The most famous mask is the "Bauta," a plain white mask with a sharp nose, symbolizing equality and anonymity.

During the carnival, daily life in Venice revolves around masquerade balls, parades, and street performances. The Piazza San Marco becomes the heart of the celebration, where participants compete in mask-making contests and pose for photos against the backdrop of historic buildings. Visitors can also join workshops to learn the art of mask-making or attend traditional dinners featuring local dishes like risotto and tiramisu.

While the carnival lasts for two weeks, its preparation takes months. Local artisans and designers spend countless hours creating unique costumes, ensuring that each year's event is more spectacular than the last. The Carnival of Venice is not just a festival; it's a living tradition that preserves Italy's rich cultural heritage and offers a glimpse into a bygone era of elegance and whimsy.

11. What is the primary reason the Carnival of Venice became famous worldwide?

- A. Its short duration and modern costumes
- B. The historical significance of its founding during the Renaissance
- C. Elaborate masks and costumes that enable social equality
- D. Annual food festivals featuring Italian cuisine

12. How did the original purpose of wearing masks during the carnival differ from modern times?

- A. Originally for artistic expression, now for anonymity
- B. Originally to hide social status, now for creative display
- C. Originally for protection during festivals, now for tradition
- D. Originally to scare away enemies, now for tourism

13. The phrase "magical world of mystery and art" (Paragraph 1) refers to:_____.

- A. The daily life of Venetian citizens
- B. The transformation of the city during the carnival
- C. The history of Venice's architecture
- D. The role of masks in modern art exhibitions

14. Why do local artisans spend months preparing for the carnival?

- A. To ensure government regulations are met
- B. To compete with international designers
- C. To create unique costumes and maintain tradition
- D. To attract more tourists to the city

15. What can be inferred about the Carnival of Venice from the passage?

- A. It has lost its cultural significance over time
- B. It combines historical traditions with modern creativity
- C. It is only celebrated by the wealthy elite
- D. It focuses solely on mask-making competitions

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

The Industrial Revolution, which began in Britain in the late 18th century, transformed society from agrarian to industrial. New inventions like the steam engine, spinning jenny, and power loom revolutionized manufacturing, leading to mass production of goods. This shift created new jobs in factories, though working conditions were often harsh and dangerous.

Before the Industrial Revolution, most people lived in rural areas and worked on farms. The rise of factories drew them to cities, causing rapid urbanization. While this brought economic growth, it also led to overcrowding and poor sanitation. Children as young as six were employed in factories, working long hours with little pay—a stark contrast to today's labor laws.

The Industrial Revolution also had global impacts. European countries used their new industrial power to colonize other regions, seeking raw materials and new markets. This period saw the rise of capitalism and the modern class system, with a growing divide between the wealthy factory owners and the working-class laborers.

Despite its challenges, the Industrial Revolution laid the foundation for modern technology and standards of living. It inspired advancements in transportation, communication, and medicine, shaping the world we live in today. Studying this era helps us understand the importance of labor rights, environmental sustainability, and balanced economic development.

16. What was a primary cause of the Industrial Revolution's start in Britain?

- A. The availability of natural resources and technological innovations
- B. The decline of agriculture and rise of socialism
- C. The government's focus on artistic development
- D. The lack of competition from other countries

17. How did urbanization during the Industrial Revolution impact society?

- A. It improved living conditions for all citizens
- B. It caused overcrowding and poor sanitation
- C. It reduced the gap between social classes
- D. It led to the decline of factory jobs

18. The phrase "stark contrast" (Paragraph 2) refers to the difference between: _____

- A. Factory owners and wealthy merchants
- B. Rural life and urban entertainment
- C. Child laborers' conditions and modern labor laws
- D. The speed of production before and after the revolution

19. What global impact did the Industrial Revolution have on non-European countries?

- A. It promoted global economic equality
- B. It led to colonization and exploitation for resources
- C. It encouraged the development of local industries
- D. It fostered peaceful trade agreements

20. What lasting legacy did the Industrial Revolution leave on modern society?

- A. The elimination of social classes
- B. The foundation for modern technology and labor rights
- C. The return to agrarian economies
- D. The decline of urban centers

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section there is a passage with ten blanks. You are required to select one word for each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choices. Each choice in the bank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

The rise of e-books has sparked a debate about whether they can replace traditional print. Supporters claim e-readers are 21, allowing users to carry hundreds of books in one device. They also argue that digital books are more 22, as they require fewer resources to produce. However, many readers prefer the 23 of holding a physical book, citing the smell of paper and the satisfaction of turning pages. [®]

A literature professor noted that e-books may affect reading comprehension. "When people scroll through text, they often 24 to retain information," she said. Yet tech companies are 25 features like annotation tools to enhance the digital reading experience. Some publishers even offer "hybrid" editions, combining e-books with 26 copies for collectors.

Libraries are also adapting, offering both digital and physical loans. A librarian explained, "The goal is to 27 diverse reader needs. Some prefer the convenience of e-books, while others seek the 28 of a library's atmosphere." As technology advances, the question isn't about replacement but about 29 both formats to meet different 30.

A. portable	B. fail	C. physical	D. affordable	E. texture
F. accommodate	G. enhancing	H. integrating	I. experiences	J. needs
K. struggle	L. developing	M. replace	N. combine	O. convenient

IV. Cloze (20 points)

Directions: There are 10 blanks in the following passage. For each blank there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the passage. Then mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Stress is the feeling you get when you're really worried about something. This is the kind of worry that troubles you for hours, or 31 days. It makes you feel blue, scared or angry. You may find it 32 to eat and sleep, or you might eat and sleep much more than usual.

Too much stress is bad for you. Stressing out can lead to serious 33 like heart illnesses. But a moderate amount of stress keeps your body and 34 alert and can make your performance better, like when you are doing a presentation to your class or 35 to the finishing line.

But, if you are seriously stressed out, try these quick and easy ways to 36. Firstly, you can go for a run, play tennis or ride your bike for a while. 37 exercise produces more beta-endorphin (β-内啡肽) that controls stress. Secondly, having a good 38 is very important. You should try to get at least seven hours of sleep every night. Thirdly, eating a healthy, balanced diet that 39 all the food groups will help. Also, you can talk to the people you trust. Keeping your feelings inside may make the situation 40 while talking to a person you trust may make you feel better. They may be able to give you advice and help you solve your problem.

W: Bye-bye.

- A. What do you think of it?
- B. Do you get along well with your colleagues?
- C. I have to hang up now.
- D. How is it going with your internship (实习)?
- E. Tell me more about it.
- F. Where shall we meet?
- G. But I know it is interesting.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Solar energy is one of the most promising renewable energy sources, harnessing the sun's power to generate electricity. Unlike fossil fuels, solar energy is clean, abundant, and sustainable, making it a key solution to combat climate change. Solar panels, made from silicon cells, convert sunlight into direct current (DC) electricity, which is then transformed into alternating current (AC) using inverters for household use.

One of the main advantages of solar energy is its reduced carbon footprint. A single solar panel can offset over a ton of carbon dioxide emissions annually, equivalent to planting 50 trees. Additionally, solar energy can lower electricity bills, especially in sunny regions, where households and businesses can generate the majority of their power needs onsite. Some countries, like Germany and China, have invested heavily in solar farms, which can power entire communities.

However, solar energy faces challenges, such as its reliance on weather conditions. Cloudy days or nighttime reduce energy production, requiring energy storage solutions like batteries. The initial cost of installing solar panels can also be high, though long-term savings often outweigh the upfront expense. Researchers are continuously improving solar panel efficiency, aiming to create panels that capture more sunlight and last longer.

As technology advances, solar energy is becoming increasingly accessible. Portable solar chargers and solar-powered vehicles are just a few examples of how this energy source is integrating into daily life. With ongoing innovation, solar energy could play a pivotal role in transitioning to a low-carbon global economy.

11. How do solar panels generate electricity?

- A. By burning fossil fuels
- B. Through wind-driven turbines
- C. Using silicon cells to convert sunlight
- D. By storing energy in batteries

12. What is a major benefit of solar energy?

- A. High carbon emissions
- B. Reduced electricity costs and lower carbon footprint
- C. Reliance on weather conditions
- D. High upfront installation costs

13. The phrase “offset over a ton of carbon dioxide” in Paragraph 2 means: _____.

- A. Increase carbon emissions

B. Neutralize carbon emissions

C. Store carbon underground

D. Release more CO²

14. Why is energy storage necessary for solar power?

- A. To generate more electricity during sunny days
- B. To solve the problem of inconsistent energy production
- C. To increase the initial installation cost
- D. To replace solar panels

15. What can be inferred about solar energy's future?

- A. It will be replaced by fossil fuels
- B. Innovation will improve its efficiency and accessibility
- C. It will remain expensive and impractical
- D. Only sunny regions will benefit from it

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

The Silk Road was a network of trade routes that connected ancient China with the Mediterranean, spanning over 6,400 kilometers. Active from the 2nd century BCE to the 14th century CE, it facilitated the exchange of goods, ideas, and cultures between East and West. While silk was the most famous export from China, other commodities like tea, porcelain, and spices were also traded.

Merchants traveled in caravans, facing harsh deserts and mountain passes to transport goods. In return, they brought back precious metals, horses, jewels, and new technologies like glass-making and astronomy from the West. The Silk Road was not just a trade route; it was a bridge for cultural dialogue, introducing Buddhism, Islam, and Christianity to China and spreading Chinese inventions like paper and gunpowder to the rest of the world.

Key cities along the Silk Road, such as Xi'an and Kashgar in China and Samarkand in Uzbekistan, became vibrant hubs of commerce and culture. These cities hosted markets where traders from diverse backgrounds interacted, leading to the fusion of art, music, and cuisine. For example, Chinese silk garments influenced fashion in Rome, while Persian carpets became popular in Chinese palaces.

Although the Silk Road declined with the rise of sea trade, its legacy endures. Today, it serves as a symbol of international cooperation and cultural exchange. The Chinese government's "Belt and Road Initiative" seeks to revive this spirit, promoting trade and friendship between nations along the ancient routes.

16. Beyond silk, what was a significant cultural exchange facilitated by the Silk Road?

- A. The spread of Chinese military strategies
- B. The introduction of Western fashion to China
- C. The exchange of religions and technological innovations
- D. The establishment of democratic governments

17. How did the Silk Road impact the economic status of cities like Xi'an?

- A. They became isolated from international trade
- B. They declined due to competition from sea routes
- C. They thrived as multicultural commercial centers
- D. They specialized in producing only silk and tea

18. The term "fusion of art, music, and cuisine" (Paragraph 3) describes:_____.

- A. The destruction of local traditions
- B. The blending of diverse cultural elements
- C. The dominance of Chinese art worldwide
- D. The rise of uniform global culture

19. What challenge did merchants face while traveling the Silk Road?

- A. Lack of demand for their goods
- B. Harsh natural environments and long distances
- C. Excessive government taxes
- D. Competition from sea-based trade routes

20. What does the "Belt and Road Initiative" aim to replicate?

- A. The military power of ancient China
- B. The cultural and economic exchange spirit of the Silk Road
- C. The isolationist policies of past dynasties
- D. The architectural achievements along the old routes

Artificial Intelligence (AI) is reshaping how students learn. Platforms like smart tutors can 21 personalized lessons based on a student's strengths and weaknesses. Teachers say AI tools help them 22 more time on creative instruction rather than grading papers. However, some worry that relying on AI may 23 critical thinking skills.

A study at Stanford University found that AI - driven feedback can 24 student engagement. "When lessons adapt in real time, students feel more 25," said an education researcher. But critics argue that AI cannot replace the 26 touch of a human teacher, especially in emotional support.

Schools are now facing 27 about how to integrate AI ethically. For example, should algorithms be used to 28 student performance predictions? Some administrators believe AI can identify struggling students early, while others fear it may create 29 expectations. As AI evolves, educators must 30 its benefits with potential risks to ensure balanced learning.

Note that there are three additional choices and you may not use any of the choices in the list more than once.

A: What is that in the picture, Emily?

B: 1 Isn't it cute?

A: Yes, this ball - shaped robot looks nice. 2

B: Sure, its name is Bob. It is about the size of a football.

A: That's small. So, what can Bob do?

B: 3 For example, it can turn on lights, answer phones and feed pets. It can also use AI to learn users' habits, so it will be very useful.

A: That sounds amazing. 4

B: No. The company didn't say how much it would cost.

A: 5 And everyone will have one of these robots at home.

B: I agree with you. Invention is changing our lives all the time.

A. What's your name?

B. It's a home robot.

C. Does it have a name?

D. I hope it is not expensive.

E. Do you know the price of the robot?

F. I can help my mother do some cleaning.

G. It can do a lot of work around the house.

III. Reading Comprehension (50 points)

Section A (30 points)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this part. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are 4 choices marked A, B, C and D. You are required to choose the ONE that best fits into the statement. Mark the corresponding letter on the Answer Sheet with a single line through the centre.

Passage 1

Questions 11-15 are based on the following passage.

Homework has been a controversial topic in education for decades. Supporters argue that it reinforces classroom learning, helps students develop time management skills, and allows parents to engage in their child's education. For example, math homework can strengthen problem-solving abilities, while reading assignments improve comprehension.

Critics, however, point out that excessive homework can lead to stress and burnout, especially for younger students. In some countries, students spend hours each night on assignments, leaving little time for physical activity or family time. Research has shown that beyond a certain point, homework's educational benefits diminish, and its negative impacts on mental health increase.

Finding a balance is key. Educators are experimenting with "homework-free" weekends or assigning more meaningful, project-based tasks instead of repetitive drills. Some schools have implemented policies limiting homework to 30 minutes per day for elementary students, gradually increasing it as students progress to higher grades.

The debate over homework ultimately revolves around what best serves student well-being and learning outcomes. While it remains an important tool, its design and quantity must be carefully considered to ensure it enhances, rather than hinders, a student's educational experience.

11. What do homework supporters emphasize?

- A. Stress reduction
- B. Reinforcement of learning and skill development
- C. Reduced family time
- D. Limitation of physical activity

12. What is a criticism of excessive homework?

- A. It improves comprehension
- B. It causes stress and burnout
- C. It strengthens problem-solving
- D. It enhances parent engagement

13. The phrase "project-based tasks" in Paragraph 3 refers to: _____.

- A. Repetitive drills
- B. Short, daily assignments
- C. Creative, long-term assignments
- D. Homework-free activities

14. How are some schools addressing homework concerns?

- A. By increasing homework quantity
- B. By eliminating homework entirely
- C. By limiting time and focusing on quality
- D. By assigning only math and reading homework

15. What is the core of the homework debate?

- A. Balancing student well-being and learning
- B. Eliminating homework for all grades
- C. Increasing parental involvement
- D. Prioritizing academic results over health

Passage 2

Questions 16-20 are based on the following passage.

CRISPR (Clustered Regularly Inter-spaced Short Palindromic Repeats) is a revolutionary gene-editing tool that allows scientists to modify DNA with unprecedented precision. Derived from bacteria's immune systems, CRISPR enables researchers to delete, add, or alter specific genes in plants, animals, and even humans. This technology has the potential to cure genetic diseases, develop drought-resistant crops, and combat invasive species.

One of the most exciting applications of CRISPR is in medicine. Scientists are using it to treat conditions like sickle cell anemia and cystic fibrosis by correcting faulty genes. In agriculture, CRISPR has been used to create crops that are more nutritious and resistant to pests, reducing the need for harmful pesticides. For example, researchers have edited rice genes to increase vitamin content, potentially addressing global hunger.

However, CRISPR also raises ethical concerns. Editing human embryos, known as germline editing, could lead to unintended consequences or be used for non-medical purposes, such as creating "designer babies." International debates continue about setting guidelines to ensure responsible use of the technology. Additionally, off-target effects—unintended changes in DNA—remain a risk, though advancements in CRISPR-Cas9 systems have improved accuracy.

Despite these challenges, CRISPR is transforming scientific research. Its ability to edit genes quickly and affordably has opened new frontiers in biology, offering hope for solutions to some of humanity's greatest challenges. As with any powerful technology, balancing innovation with ethical considerations will be crucial to maximizing its benefits.

16. What is CRISPR technology?

- A. A tool for editing DNA
- B. A method for growing crops
- C. A cure for all diseases
- D. A type of bacterial infection

17. How is CRISPR used in agriculture?

- A. To increase pesticide use
- B. To create drought-resistant and nutritious crops
- C. To eliminate all plant species
- D. To develop invasive species

18. The term "germline editing" in Paragraph 3 refers to: _____.

- A. Editing genes in adult cells
- B. Editing genes in embryos
- C. Editing plant genes only
- D. Editing bacterial DNA

19. What ethical concern is associated with CRISPR?

- A. Lack of precision
- B. High cost of technology
- C. Unintended use in human embryos
- D. Inability to treat genetic diseases

20. What can be concluded about CRISPR's future?

- A. It will have no impact on medicine
- B. Ethical guidelines are unnecessary
- C. It requires balance between innovation and ethics
- D. Off-target effects cannot be improved

Section B (20 points)

Directions: In this section there is a passage with ten blanks. You are required to select one word for each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. As Internet users become more dependent on the Internet to store information, are people remember less? If you know your computer will save information, why 31 it in your own personal memory, your brain? Experts are wondering if the Internet is changing 32 we remember and how.

In a recent study, Professor Betsy Sparrow 33 some experiments. She and her research team wanted to know whether the Internet is changing memory. In the first experiment, they gave people 40 unimportant facts to type into a computer. The first group of people understood that the computer would 34 the information. The second group understood that the computer would not save it. Later, the second group remembered the information better. People in the first group knew they could find the 35 again, so they did not try to remember it.

In another experiment, the researchers gave people facts to remember, and told them 36 to find the information on the Internet. The information was in a specific computer folder (文件夹). 37, people later remember the folder location (位置) better than the facts. When people use the Internet, they do not remember the information. Rather, they remember how to find it. This is called "transactive memory (交互记忆)".

According to Sparrow, we are not becoming people with poor memories 38 of the Internet. Instead, computer users are developing stronger transactive memories; that is, people are learning how to organize huge 39 of information so that they are able to access it at a later date. This doesn't mean we are becoming 40 more or less intelligent, but there is no doubt that the way we use memory is changing.

Section A (30 points)

Passage 1

Questions 26-30 are based on the following passage

My 12-year-old niece was staying with us for a couple of days. She was remembering some acts of kindness we did together when she was less than five years old. We talked about how so much had changed, and with pandemic, how difficult it would be to do so many of those things, especially when it comes to strangers.

The next day, saying goodbye to my husband, I needed something from the downtown area and happened to take her with me. As we walked around on the street, we heard a beautiful male voice singing a very soulful song. We turned around to see a middle-aged man sitting on a street corner with his guitar. A couple were sitting on a bench near by and listening to his music.

After getting a few things done, we happened to sit at an outdoor dining restaurant across from him on the other side of the street. My niece was learning how to sing herself, and she kept smiling and saying how wonderful his singing was. Seeing how moved she was by his music, at the end of our meal, I gave her a ten-dollar bill and asked her to walk across the street and put it in his bowl.

She was a little surprised. "Really?" she asked with bright eyes. I nodded. So she headed over and as she approached, the man was just finishing a song and started talking to her, and they ended up having a sweet conversation. She told him how touched she was by his music, and he ended up telling her that she made his day. As she was excitedly repeating the conversation back to me, she mentioned, "He didn't even know how much it was, He was just thankful that someone was enjoying his music."

26. What does paragraph 1 mainly tell us about the author and his niece?

- A. What they did in the past.

28. What did the author encourage her niece to do?

- A. Offer some food to the man.
- B. Learn music from the man.
- C. Give money to the man.
- D. Praise the man's performance.

29. What did the author's niece do after meeting the man?

- A. They shared singing skills.
- B. The man refused her kind help.
- C. She introduced the author to the man.
- D. They expressed gratitude to each other.

30. How did the street musician react to the author's niece's action?

- A. He asked for more money.
- B. He offered to teach her to sing.
- C. He valued her appreciation more than the money.
- D. He immediately started a new song.
